Hull Proffers World Program to Establish 'Order Based on Law'

Influence of U. S. 'Never More Urgently Needed,' Secretary Asserts.

Hits Isolationists For Bitter Illusion

Denounces 'Brutality' as He Reiterates His Faith in Peace.

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., June 3.—Secretary of State Hull tonight laid down a four-point program of United States co-operation toward a "world order based on law," and appealed for a "strong united public opinon" to back it.

Before the Bar Association of Tennessee, meeting in his native State, Hull, declared that with "a spirit of international anarchy" abroad, "there was never a time in our national history when the influence of the United States in support of international law was more urgently needed."

Rebukes Isolationists.

After rebuking isolationists, whose "dream of safety and security" he called "a bitter illusion," he stated this program:

"With the world still in the throes of a profound economic dislocation, we are prepared to join with other nations in directing every effort toward the restoration and strengthening of sound and constructive international economic relationships.

"With the world groaning under the burden of mounting armaments, we are preparing to join with other nations in moving resolutely toward bringing about an effective agreement on limitation and progressive reduction of armaments.

Denounces "Brutality."

"With the use of armed force assuming the aspect of scarcely imaginable brutality, we are prepared to join with other nations in resuming and vigorously carrying forward the work, so auspiciously begun at The Hague two generations ago, of humanizing by common agreement the rules and practices of warfare.

"We are prepared to join with other nations in exploring all other methods of revitalizing the spirit of international co-operation and in making use of every practicable means of giving it substance and reality through the numberless forms of concrete application of such principles of international political, economic and cultural re-

War on Catholics In Tabasco State Banned by Mexico

Mexico City, June 3 (AP).—A government communication banning religious persecution in Tabasco state was interpreted here today as a reprimand to the antireligious regime of that southern Mexican area.

The communication to a group of Tabasco Cathelics said: "All authorities have express instructions to abstain from persecutions" of Catholics.

It was dated May 12 and was in response to a message from Catholics to President Cardenas expressing fears the tense situation in Tabasco presaged bloodshed.

Those fears proved justified Monday when Catholics gathered at Villahermosa, capital of Tabasco, to erect a new church. There was a clash with state authorities in which four men, a woman and a child were killed.

Welles Attacks Civil Bombing As 'Barbarous'

Welles Assails Barbarity.

By the United Press.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, with the approval of President Roosevelt, yesterday condemned the "slaughter of civilian populations" by aerial bombardment in Spain and China.

In a statement which received Presidential sanction at a morning White House conference, Welles said the United States Government desired to reiterate to the world its "emphatic reprobation of such methods and such acts."

The statement, aimed directly at Japan and at nationals and foreigners engaged in the Spanish conflict, was the third vigorous protest by this Government within eight months against "ruthless" and "barbarous" warfare on unprotected civilian populations.

Japanese Steps Noted.

Welles described such attacks as a "violation of the most elementary principles of those standards of humane conduct which have been developed as an essential part of modern civilization."

At the same time, however, he expressed this Government's gratification over steps taken by Japan to ease Japanese-American relations in China, but pointed out that several serious questions were still unsettled, particularly regarding American properties.

It was revealed Wednesday that the United States had sent another note to Japan rebuking the Tokyo

RooseveltSon Backs Wearin In Iowa Race

Story He Dropped Trip to Aid 'My Friend' Called False.

James Roosevelt, the President's secretary-son, dispatched a telegram to Iowa yesterday referring to Representative Otha D. Wearin as his "friend."

His action was regarded generally as a last-minute Administration move to bestow approval upon Wearin before Iowa voters go to the polls Monday to choose between the House member seeking the Democratic Senatorial nomination, and Senator Gillette, the incumbent, who fell into disfavor with the Administration when he voted against the Supreme Court enlargement bill.

Wearin entered the House in the Roosevelt landslide of 1932. He has long been identified with Texas Representative Maverick's "Young Turks," but voted against the original Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the National Recovery Administration acts in the early days of the New Deal.

Furore Raised Here.

The telegram, which caused a furore, especially on Capitol Hill, was addressed to Ed G. Dunn, Mason City, United States district attorney, as follows:

"Dear Ed:

"I am informed that a story is being circulated that I canceled a trip I proposed to make in Iowa in behalf of the candidacy of Otha Wearin during my recent visit to the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn.

"This is a deliberate misrepresentation intended to injure my friend, Otha Wearin.

"I had no such plans to come to Iowa because my doctors would not have permitted them.

"If I had such plans, you may be sure I would have kept them.

"You have my full authority to use this statement."

Gillette Denies Indorsement.

Dunn said he did not know where the reports Roosevelt referred to had originated and added that he considered the telegram an "unqualified indorsement of Mr. Wearin."

Senator Gillette, on the other hand, was quoted from Des Moines by the Associated Press as ignoring the allusion to "my friend" in the telegram and asserting he found in the message evidence that the White House was neutral in the primary. The wire "very clearly confirms the lack of authenticity behind the statements that Mr. James Roosevelt intended to come to Iowa," Gillette declared.

"It further confirms the assurances that have repeatedly come to me that the White House is strictly neutral in the Iowa Senatorial primary," he added.

Governor Backs Gillette.

Gillette found a champion in Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel who, in a speech prepared for delivery over five Iowa radio stations last night, dropped all semblances of technical neutrality and publicly indorsed his candidacy.

Kraschel, who a week ago upbraided Harry L. Hopkins when the

Lightning Kills 2 at Golf Match In Kansas City; 3d Near Death

Kansas City, June 3 (U.P.).—William Boyle, contractor-politician of the Pendergast organization, and Eddie Critchfield, employe of the Carter Waters Co., were killed today when lightning struck a crowd of 400 spectators watching the $5,000 Open golf tournament at the Hillcrest Golf Club here.

Tom Cunningham, a Board of Trade employe, was injured critically by the same bolt. Physicians said it was doubtful if he would recover. A fourth man, George Clark, was knocked down, but arose unhurt.

The spectators were standing near the ninth green, watching a threesome, which included Horton Smith, approaching.

Officials immediately called off play for the day.

Other top-ranking golfers were playing nearby the group of approximately 25 that had gathered under trees surrounding the ninth green for protection from a light shower. Witnesses in the nearby clubhouse said the bolt appeared to lift the entire group "off the ground."

The four that were knocked down were standing together under an umbrella held by Boyle. The bolt blackened the faces of Boyle, Cunningham and Critchfield, but did not burn their clothes.

Clark, formerly assistant professional at the club, said the "flash blinded and deafened me for several minutes." He said Boyle's clothing was smoking and "he was dead when others reached him."

"I believe my rubber raincoat must have saved me," Clark said.

In the threesome, other than Smith, were Leland Gibson, Kansas City, and Leonard Doson, Springfield, Mo.

G-Men Rush to Lonely Shack From Which Test Bottle Floated to Spot Where Body Came Ashore; Navy Searches for Cash.

By the Associated Press.

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 3.—Federal detectives investigating the kidnap-murder of 12-year-old Peter Levine, set out today in quest of the occupant of a shack on a lonely, rock-bound island not far from the spot where Peter's headless torso was discovered last Sunday.

He was described by fishermen as an eccentric. It was further said that a motor-driven boat was anchored in the waters nearby the shack—a craft such as might have been used to dump Peter's wire-bound body into Long Island sound.

Federal agents and New Rochelle detectives planned to examine the boat for possible blood-stains, and they indicated that the shack would be searched for pieces of copper wire. Peter's body had been trussed with wire of that type.

Waterfront informants who gave the information to G-men said that a bottle placed in the stream 200 feet off shore from the shack was

2 Nazi Captains In N.Y. Spy Case Skip Bail, Sail

Leave on Europa, Despite $2,500 Bond; Draftsman Still Detained.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Two German ship captains, who earlier in the day had been held in $2,500 bail each as material witnesses in the Government's foreign espionage investigation, with the explanation from United States Attorney Lamar Hardy that the bail was to prevent their flight, sailed nevertheless shortly after midnight on the Europa of the North German Lloyd Line, which cleared for Cherbourg, Southampton and Bremen.

Two key men in the inquiry had already departed secretly for Germany without passports.

The men who sailed on the Europa were Capt. Heinrich Lorenz of the North German Lloyd liner Chemitz and former chief of the Europa, and Capt. Frans Friske, of the Hamburg-American Line's Hindenberg. A one-armed German-born draftsman from the Bath (Me.) Iron Works, Christian Danielson, was unable to raise bail of $10,000 and is still held by the authorities.

30,000 Turks Peril French Mandate in Arab Rule Dispute

Paris, June 3 (AP).—French official quarters received reports tonight 30,000 Turkish troops were gathered near Turkey's southern border adjacent to Alexandretta, a district in France's Syrian mandate, where Arab-Turk tension led to a proclamation of martial law.

Way Is Cleared For 15-Million Alley Building

Palmisano to Seek House Vote Monday; Straus, Ihlder Ready.

Plans were completed yesterday for a $15,000,000 slum clearance and low cost housing program for the District.

Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee announced that Monday he will ask the House to concur in Senate revisions to amendments giving the Alley Dwelling Authority power to borrow the money from the United States Housing Authority and the Treasury.

Nathan Straus, USHA administrator, announced that he would earmark $10,000,000 for the ADA within 48 hours after application was made for funds.

Ihlder Promises Action.

John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, said he was "delighted" to hear that funds would be available from the USHA, and added he would apply for "some funds" as soon as he was "in position" to do so.

He will be unable to make application until the House has concurred in revisions of the Senate

Recovery Bill Passes Senate, All Curbs Off Use of $3,722,000,000

25 Ct.-Hour Is Made Basic By Conferees

House Child Labor Ban Also Adopted for Wage Bill.

By Sidney Olson.

Establishing a rigid 25-cent-an-hour minimum-wage base and agreeing definitely to adopt the more extensive House ban on child labor, the Senate-House wage-hour bill conferees made steady progress yesterday at their first intensive session.

The provisions over which lengthier struggles may be waged by the conference committee were passed over momentarily, with part of the showdown slated for today at 11 a. m. and the rest for the first two days of next week.

The flat 25-cent-an-hour wage was fixed specifically. No consideration was given to whether the House version, graduating minimum wages up to 40 cents an hour in three years, or the Senate bill, establishing a board with authority to set minimum wages above that figure, would operate after that point.

Hardest Task Ahead.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, Senate Labor Committee chairman, said last night:

"The hardest work is still ahead. I don't believe it possible to reach an agreement tomorrow. The discussion so far has been deliberative to an extreme."

It was learned that William Green, president, American Federation of Labor, would issue a statement Monday attacking any move to empower a board or the Labor Department to set flexible differentials in various industries according to the labor conditions in the areas affected. (The Senate bill contains this version, and Green strongly supported the rigid House bill with its statutory minimums.)

The conference committee is heavily loaded, however, with members who believe in the wisdom of flexibility, where insuperable hardships would not be imposed on budding or weak industries, and wherein a board would operate under the theory of trying to impose minimums as near as possible the 40-cent-an-hour, 40-hour-a-week Senate provision.

With adjournment almost entirely hinging on quick agreement on the year-old, bitterly controversial measure, strong pressure from many sources was put on the conferees to hasten their deliberations.

Bound Up With Adjournment.

The bill carries with it the fate of early adjournment plans. The conferees must finish early next week to get the bill through both Houses, and in order to prevent Senate filibustering the measure must carry differentials. In order to prevent the House, strongly insistent on the rigid bill, from killing the measure entirely, the conferees must preserve a certain rigidity.

The problem, creasing the brows of all Congressional leaders, must be solved nicely, with a neat way

Wallace Steps Up Purchase of Food for Poor

FSCC Told to Canvass Relief Agencies on Need as Fund Is Voted.

By the Associated Press.

The Government announced last night it would buy larger quantities of surplus farm products and distribute them to persons on relief.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said this "emergency" action would be taken under the President's leadership to meet the "twin disasters" of urban unemployment and price-depressing accumulations of farm goods.

He directed the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to canvass State and local relief agencies on needs for food and clothing.

Wallace emphasized that the corporation would seek "insofar as possible" to supplement rather than replace supplies ordinarily purchased for the destitute through regular commercial channels.

Senate Votes Funds.

"We must be sure," he said, "that any surplus commodities supplied to families on relief are insofar as possible a net addition to the amounts already being consumed, and do not handicap the functioning of the regular commercial system."

Additional funds to carry out the program were voted by the Senate yesterday. It approved a proposal by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, earmarking $50,000,000 of the proposed WPA appropriation for surplus commodity purchases.

Officials said the Surplus Commodities Corporation already had available $17,000,000 for purchase of surplus farm products during June, and $75,000,000 for such purchases in the fiscal year which starts July 1.

In his statement, Wallace said: "Once more the factory shut-

Spending Measure Voted 60 to 10 in Midnight Session.

Each Move Beaten To Earmark Fund

House Totals Raised; 3 Democrats and 7 of G.O.P. Vote No.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate last night passed the $3,722,000,000 spending-lending bill at the close of a 13-hour session, after again refusing in two successive votes to place any limitation on political use of the vast fund.

Stripped of the Woodrum restriction on WPA spending, and free of threatened earmarking amendments, the Senate passed the bill at 11:50 p. m., in the "flexible" form asked by the President.

The vote was 60 to 10.

Action came after three gruelling day and night sessions in which leaders rode high in the saddle, crushing all unwanted changes and turning back coalition efforts to remove billions for relief spending from "one-man control."

Adds to House Totals.

Bolstered over House figures, the Senate bill added $300,000,000 to the Housing Administration's lending power and approved another $212,000,000 for farm parity payments. For WPA relief, $1,425,000,000 was provided, for rural electrification, $100,000,000, and for PWA "pump priming," $965,000,000, plus $400,000,000 from the PWA revolving fund.

The measure now goes to conference with the House. Majority Leader Barkley told the Senate a speedy sine die adjournment of Congress depended on a rapid conference agreement not only on the spending bill, but on the wage-hour measure already in conference. He predicted Congress would lock its door at the end of next week.

Final passage found only three Democrats voting "no"—Senators Byrd, Burke and Copeland. They joined seven Republicans in opposing to the bitter end the broad spending grants—Austin, Hale, Johnson, of California; McNary, Townsend, Vandenberg and White.

Earmarking Drive Halts.

Copeland, of New York, had led an unsuccessful earmarking drive. When his amendment to set aside $324,000,000 in PWA funds for specific rivers and harbors and flood control projects was defeated, 43 to 29, all similar efforts collapsed. Futilely, Copeland sought to earmark another $85,000,000 for Army housing, while Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, asked $100,000,000 for "Dust Bowl" reservoirs. It was no use.

But the coalition fight to limit the

McCloskey's Firm Wins Contract for $4,372,700 D.C. Job

The Treasury Department yesterday awarded to McCloskey & Co., of Philadelphia, a $4,372,700 contract for construction of an annex to the Government Printing Office at North Capitol and H streets.

The firm, headed by Matthew H. McCloskey, coleader of the Philadelphia Democratic machine, was the lowest of 13 bidders.

In the Pennsylvania primary struggle Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, charged that McCloskey had been awarded $10,000,000 in State contracts under the administration of Gov. Earle, Senate entry of the regular party organization. Earle did not deny he had borrowed $30,000 from McCloskey, but said he had paid back all but $6,000.

The McCloskey company has won seven Federal construction contracts totaling $19,197,230 in eight years.

House Military Group Agrees On Camp Springs for Airport

The House Military Affairs Committee yesterday agreed to report the Camp Springs airport bill favorably, with amendments, as members of the Naval Affairs Committee repared to revolt against what they now refer to as "the President's nightmare."

Chairman May of the Military Affairs Committee stated two major amendments had been adopted, along with a dozen minor changes.

One amendment authorizes compensation to the Bureau of Standards for its $150,000 investment in radio equipment near Camp Springs. Another places the airport under control of a commission to be set up under the civil aeronautics bill now in conference.

As Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, disclosed that members of the Naval Affairs Committee, of which he is ranking minority member, will fight the Camp Springs bill on the floor, it was learned that President Roosevelt has written a letter to the Navy Department directing officials to cease its opposition.

Naval officials contend the operation of an airport at Camp Springs will interfere seriously with its radio transmitting station at Cheltenham, Md.

The attitude of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee was problematical. Chairman Lanham and other members indicated their opposition to the Camp Springs site.

Lanham has intimated that the committee may recommend a new site, although he realizes there would be little chance of enactment of new legislation right now.

Maas, an aviator himself, said he had telegraphed Chairman Vinson, of the Naval Affairs Committee, informing him of developments and that Vinson, an avowed foe of Camp Springs, replied that he would return to Washington at once.

Lewis Shuns British Union Law Inquiry

C. I. O. Head Refuses Post Fearing Wagner Act Revision Is Planned.

By the Associated Press.

No sooner had President Roosevelt announced a study of the British trade union act yesterday than John L. Lewis refused to have anything to do with the inquiry.

Anxiety lest the study be used to bring about changes in the Wagner labor relations act led to the refusal, the C. I. O. leader indicated.

He stuck to his "boycott" of the investigation despite a specific denial by President Roosevelt that it would have anything to do with possible changes in the Wagner act, which many businessmen have criticized as being one-sided.

Writes to Miss Perkins.

Mr. Roosevelt told reporters the study, to be made by a special commission he will send to England this summer, was designed to clear up misinformation in this country about the British law.

At the same time Lewis issued a statement addressed to Secretary of Labor Perkins. In it the C. I. O. leader said he previously had accepted an invitation to be represented on the President's commission. But after reading published reports that the study might be the basis for modification of the Wagner act, Lewis continued, he had changed his mind.

"The Committee for Industrial Organization," he declared, "cannot sanction such an enterprise, nor permit its representative to serve on such a commission. It will oppose amendment or modification of the Wagner act."

The American Federation of Labor, arch enemy of the C. I. O., also was invited to participate in the study and agreed to do so. Its leaders chose Robert Watt, of Massachusetts, now American labor delegate to the International Labor Organization meeting in Geneva, to be a commission member.

Mr. Roosevelt did not announce the personnel of the commission because, he said, its membership was incomplete. He declined to confirm reports that Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., and Lloyd Garrison, former member of the old Labor Relations Board, had been invited to take part.

The President said it was his own idea to send the commission to England to get a clear and simple report on the British statute. The whole subject of labor relations is an evolutionary one, he told reporters, who asked if he was satisfied with the Wagner act. And, he added, England is far in front in the development of legislation in this field.

Labor Department experts said the British act has four principal provisions:

It makes "sympathetic" strikes and lockouts illegal, although legalizing other particular types of strikes and lockouts.

Mass picketing is restricted.

Political use of trade union funds is restricted.

It limits the affiliation of civil servants with trade union organizations.

Registration of trade unions in England is voluntary, but, once they have registered, the law imposes upon them a legal responsibility.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of the labor relations act, told reporters he thought valuable information might be gained by the commission's study of the British act. He remarked that British labor was 90 per cent organized. As for revision of the labor relations act, he said:

"My attitude always has been, 'show me your proposed amendments and I'll tell you whether I am for them.'"

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, critic of the labor board, reiterated that he believed an investigation of the Wagner act's operation was needed. Burke favors an amendment to that act to forbid coercion of workers by either employer or union. He also wants a statement in the law permitting employers as well as employes to invoke the services of the board.

Navy's Eye Tests Disqualify Scores Of New Officers

Faulty eyesight has cut short the naval careers of several score midshipmen in the last year, it was revealed yesterday.

Nearly all of the 26 Naval Academy graduates who received diplomas but were denied commissions were disqualified because of eye defects, it was leirned. Only three will get a re-examination in the fall.

Numerous members of the second, third and fourth classes already have been quietly dropped because of sight difficulties, it was said.

A new system of eye examination adopted last year is expected to cut down the number of midshipmen who cannot be commissioned because of eye defects.

Admiral David F. Sellers, who retired recently, told Congress in January he was responsible for the new tests. Appointees to the Academy now are rejected before they actually enter the school if they show near-sighted tendencies, he said, whereas previously they might be halfway through the four-year course before being dropped.

A similar measure was introduced by Senator Lonergan (Democrat), of Connecticut, yesterday after a conference with legal representatives of 26 States.

President Adds 2 Speeches to Summer Plans

Both Addresses Set for June 30 in N. Y.; Others Likely.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday arranged to add more miles to his travels and two more speeches to his state papers.

Both addresses will be delivered at New York City June 30. One will be at the laying of the cornerstone for the World Fair Federal Building at 1 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time), and the other at 3 p. m. to the National Education Association.

The President has an extensive schedule of traveling and speeches this summer.

He will attend the wedding June 18 of John, his youngest son, to Miss Anne Lindsay Clark, at Nahant, Mass. On June 27 he will speak at Wilmington, Del., at the 300th anniversary celebration of the landing of Swedish colonists.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, July 3, will find the President in that Pennsylvania town for a speech on the spot where President Lincoln delivered his famous address.

July 8 has been set aside for a Presidential visit to Ohio. Mr. Roosevelt will speak at the Northwest Territory celebration at Marietta that day. He also may attend the dedication of the Muskingum conservancy project at New Philadelphia the same day.

There has been talk he might speak to the people of Kentucky July 9, shortly before the Democratic primary. Senator Barkley, Democratic leader and Presidential adviser, and Gov. Chandler are running for the Senatorial nomination.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, has invited the Chief Executive to be the first incumbent President to visit Oklahoma and has suggested July 10 as a date.

San Francisco has invited Mr. Roosevelt for a visit in July, and Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, has indicated the President was thinking seriously of accepting.

The Chief Executive has tentative plans to sail down the West Coast of South America in a Navy cruiser. He may travel from one of the California ports to several Latin American countries and back through the Panama Canal to the Eastern seaboard.

Historic Naval Prints Placed On View in D.C.

National Museum Showing Part of Eberstadt Collection.

One sixth of the country's largest collection of naval historical prints was placed on exhibition yesterday on the ground floor of the National Museum building, Tenth street and Constitution avenue. It will be open daily from 9 to 4:30 and Sundays from 1:30 to 4:30 until June 30.

The 260 engravings, etchings and lithographs of ships and seascapes by Dutch, German, English and Scandinavian masters date from as early as 1571 to the present century.

The prints, known as the Eberstadt collection have been donated to the Naval Historical Foundation by Mrs. Ferdinand Eberstadt of New York and Long Island. She acquired them from Admiral von Fischel of the German navy. He collected them for years before the World War.

They are of interest not only as works of art but historically since they picture many important naval battles. They show the development of shipping, naval tactics and marine technology over a long period.

Only one American sea battle is included in the prints on exhibit. The inscription underneath the print is far from flattering to American sea power during the Revolutionary War, reading:

"To Captain P. B. V. Broke, commanding His Majesty's ship Shannon, his officers, seamen, and marines, this representation of their gallantry boarding the American frigate Chesapeak, being no more superior in force, and hauling down the enemy's colors in 15 minutes from commencement of action is most respectfully inscribed by their obedient servant, Robert Dodd."

The day otherwise was a routine one with a picnic lunch at the beach and a swim.

Catholic People's Party Joins Sudetens in Autonomy Stand.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 3.—The Slovak Catholic People's Party tonight presented fresh worries to the Czechoslovak government by autonomy demands like those of Konrad Henlein's Sudeten Germans.

The Slovaks voiced their demand in Pressburg. Their program called for a Slovak legislative body in addition to the Czechoslovak parliament, transfer of a part of the state executive power to a Slovak government and the creation of a supreme court.

Directors of the Slovak Catholic People's Party who drafted the program said it would be announced formally at a party demonstration at Pressburg June 6.

Americans Displeased.

They said 50,000 Slocaks would be there.

Of Czechoslovakia's 15,000,000 inhabitants 2,300,000 are Slocaks, most of whom have supported the government of the dominant Czechs.

(Heretofore, the most vociferous minority demands for autonomy have been voiced by the Sudeten Germans who number 3,500,000.)

Dr. Peter Hletko, of Chicago, leader of an American Slovak delegation touring the country, said in an interview that while American Slovaks stand by the Czechoslovak government, at the same time a majority of them favor a Slovak autonomous program.

Dr. Hletko added he was not pleased with the results so far of talks with government authorities because the Slovaks failed to obtain assurances the Pittsburgh Treaty would be respected and sanctioned in Poland.

The Pittsburgh pact, signed June 30, 1918, was an agreement between Czech and Slovak societies in the United States to the principles that Czechoslovakia, whose independence then had not been proclaimed, should grant "cultural self-government" to Slovaks—Slovak schools, language and administration. The Hletko delegation brought the agreement to be exhibited during celebrations of the twentieth anniversary of the republic's birth next October 28.

The situation was further clouded when Ernst Eisenlohr, German Minister to Czechhoslovakia, protested sharply against the seizure of a swastika from a Sudeten German couple at Niederullersdorf Sunday by Czechoslovakia soldiers and the alleged ill treatment of another German.

Czechs Release Troops.

London (Saturday), June 4 (U.P.).—Premier Milan Hodza of Czechoslovakia was quoted today by G. Ward Price, correspondent of the London Daily Mail, as saying 49,000 of the 70,000 Czech reservists called to the colors on May 21 had been released from training in the last five days.

The premier emphasized in the interview given Price at Prague the reservists were summoned by order of the ministry of national defense and the move should not be misconstrued as mobilization.

North German Lloyd Line's passenger traffic, announced the sailing of the two captains and said "naturally they will be available if and when called." He added the pair were "absolutely innocent."

United States Attorney Hardy could not be reached for comment.

Hardy hid told Federal Judge John C. Clancy of the flight of Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl and Werner Gudenberg on German ships, the former without passage money or passport and the latter as a stowaway.

J. Edgar Hoover, head G-man, charged Hardy's office yesterday with responsibility for the flight of the two witnesses. Hardy declined to enter "any collateral issue" with Hover, but denied his office was responsible.

Danielson owns substantial property in Bath and in Germany, Hardy said.

"A number of persons who have been in the habit of traveling back and forth to Europe, and who may have been involved in this case, have remained abroad since this investigation started," said the United States attorney.

1,077 Middies Off on Summer Training Cruise

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 3.—The battleships New York, Texas and Wyoming, with 1,077 midshipmen aboard, steamed down the Chesapeake Bay tonight on a summer practice cruise to France, Denmark and England.

Making the cruise are 580 members of the new senior class at the Naval Academy, and 497 members of the new sophomore class. Six West Point Cadets, under a courtesy agreement with the Military Academy, also were aboard.

Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson, commander of the training detachment, U. S. fleet, is in charge of the cruise. The detachment also includes the battleship Arkansas and 14 destroyers.

Six of the destroyers will leave the Academy on Monday with one-third of the new junior class midshipmen on a three-week Atlantic Coast cruise. Three cruises will be made during the summer to take the entire junior class.

Schuschnigg And Countess Wed by Proxy

Brother Acts for Nazis' Prisoner, Who Sends Bride Kisses by Mail.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, June 3.—Kurt Schuschnigg, former Chancellor of Austria, whose fate at the hands of his Nazi captors still is uncertain, was married to, beautiful Countess Vera Fugger von Babenhausen today at a ceremony he could not even attend.

Dr. Arthur Schuschnigg, his brother, took the place of the former chancellor as proxy at the wedding in the private chapel of the Dominican church.

Schuschnigg, champion of Austria's lost independence and a foe of Nazilism, has been detained by the Nazi authorities since Germany annexed Austria, March 13.

He disappeared May 28 from Belvedere Castle, his home in detention, but authorities have insisted he still was "somewhere in Vienna."

His platinum blonde bride is 34 years old and is considered one of the most beautiful women of Vienna. She was his daily companion at Belvidere Palace until his removal last Saturday to an undisclosed place.

But today, it was believed, even she did not know where her husband was being held. It was reported she received a letter from the bridegroom, dated only Vienna, which said:

"By this time we should be man and wife. This makes me extremely happy. A thousand kisses. KURT."

After the ceremony she told a friend she expected her husband soon would join her in the small apartment she took today in downtown Vienna.

She told the friend she and her husband were "poor." To save expenses she moved her trunks and other household belongings with her in a taxi.

Both had been married before. The first marriage of the countess, mother of four children, was annulled. Schuschnigg's first wife died, leaving him one son.

Maj. Gen. Arthur von Schuschnigg, the former chancellor's father, was witness for the bride and the bridegroom's witness was the sacristan of the church.

The only wedding guests beside the witnesses, it was said, were two maids who had been confined to Belvedere Castle with Schuschnigg before he was taken away by the state police.

Hull Asks World Ordered on Law; Scores 'Anarchy'

Hull

lations as those to which I have referred."

At another point, Hull asserted: "I am convinced of the falsity of the doctrine that armed conflict is the natural and inevitable state of man.

"I, for one, have an abiding faith that eventually resort to armed force as an instrument of national policy will become so odious and revolting to the conscience of mankind that war will be relegated to the limbo of things forgotten.

"I am certain that no legitimate differences that may arise among nations are incapable of settlement by peaceful means."

Just prior to stating his four-point program, Secretary Hull said the United States was duty-bound to exert moral force toward the peaceful settlement of disputes.

"Within the limitations of our traditional policies, and without entangling alliances or involvements, we should co-operate, sincerely and resolutely, with like-minded nations working toward the same goal toward which we ourselves are striving," he said.

For his program he painted a dark background of world conditions.

"Solemn contractual obligations," he said, "are brushed aside with a light heart and a contemptuous gesture. Respect for law and observance of the pledged word have sunk to an inconceivably low level. The outworn slogans of the glorification of war are again resounding in many portions of the globe.

"Armed force, naked and unashamed, is again being used as an instrument of policy and a means of attaining national ends through aggression and aggrandizement. It is being employed with brutality and savagery that outrage and shock every humane instinct."

Senator Reynolds Faces Vote Today

Raleigh, N. C., June 3 (AP).—North Carolina Democrats in their biennial primary tomorrow will nominate a United States Senator, members of Congress, a State utilities commissioner and county officials.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of Asheville, and his opponent, former Representative Frank Hancock, of Oxford, both pledged to the New Deal, forecast victory.

Highlights of Hull Speech

Highlights of the address by Secretary Hull on international law, at Nashville, Tenn., follow:

The most important problem now confronting the human race is that of establishing throughout the world . . . an unshakeable regime of order under law. What is most needed for the accomplishment of this task is persistent and determined effort to bring men to realize that such a regime is essential and to cause them to give full and effective support to the principles and processes of international law.

* * * *

There was never a time in our national history when the influence of the United States in support of international law was more urgently needed than at present—to serve both our own best interests and those of the entire human race. The world is today in the grip of a severe upheaval, the outcome of which will affect profoundly the future of mankind.

* * * *

In the circumstances of today, it is a part of wisdom and prudence for a great nation like ours to provide adequately for its national defense. . . . But . . . stable and durable peace can be achieved only through the universal enthronement of the spirit of respect for law and through a resumption of determined efforts toward international co-operation.

At this crucial juncture of history, it is our Nation's duty to itself to make its appropriate contribution toward preservation and advancement of the principles of international law and of the orderly and co-operative processes of international relations, which have evolved with—and have, in turn, promoted—the development of civilization. Toward that end we should maintain and strengthen our own adherence to the principles and processes of international law.

* * * *

We should exert all moral force of which we are capable toward influencing other nations to work for the same end and to accept and employ the civilized practices of pacific settlement in connection with such controversies as may arise among them. We should be prepared to aid, in every practicable way, resort to such peaceful means of settlement. Within the limitations of our traditional policies, and without entangling alliances or involvements, we should co-operate, sincerely and resolutely, with like-minded nations working toward the same goal toward which we ourselves are striving.

* * * *

All these are necessary and constructive steps in which a free and powerful nation like ours can and should participate wholeheartedly if durable peace is to be firmly established and civilization is to survive and advance. There is a desperate need in our country, and in every country, of a strong and united public opinion in support of such a renewal and demonstration of faith in the possibility of a world order based on law and international co-operative effort. When such public opinion has developed and when the momentous issue of today—the fateful decision as to whether relations among nations shall be governed by armed force or by co-operation and order under law—is clearly understood and visualized, there will be no insuperable difficulty in finding acceptable ways and means of achieving the desired end.

Welles Calls Civil Bombings In Spain, Japan Barbarous

government for failing to guarantee American rights in the Chinese war zone. Tokyo responded promptly by restoring certain American missionary property in China and by taking other measures designed to ease Japanese-American relations.

Bombings Called Barbarous.

Welles' statement said that "the Government of the United States has on numerous occasions expressed its belief that the outbreak of serious hostilities anywhere in the world might in one way or another affect the interests of this country."

"Both in the Far East and in Europe," it said, "there have been going on hostilities, every aspect of which the American people and this government have deplored.

"When the methods used in the conduct of these hostilities take the form of ruthless bombing of unfortified localities with the resultant slaughter of civilian populations and, in particular, of women and children, public opinion in the United States regards such methods as barbarous.

"Several times during the past year, especially on September 28, 1937, and on March 1, 1938, the Secretary of State has expressed the views of this country to the effect that any general bombing of an extensive area wherein there resided a large population engaged in peaceful pursuits is contrary to every principle of law and humanity.

"During the past few days, there have taken place in China and in Spain aerial bombings which have resulted in the death of many hundreds of the civilian population.

"This government, while scrupulously adhering to the policy of nonintervention, reiterates this Nation's emphatic reprobation of such methods and such acts—which are in violation of the most elementary principles of those standards of humane conduct which have been developed as an essential part of modern civilization."

London, June 3 (U.P.).—Great Britain today paved the way for an international convention on limitation of aerial bombardments when protests were sent to the Japanese and Spanish nationalist governments against the "horrors" of air raids on civilian populations.

Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in Commons that the protests had been delivered by Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador to Tokyo, and Sir Robert Hodgson, British agent to the Spanish nationalist regime at Burgos.

Chamberlain also instructed the air ministry to draw up a plan for limitation of air attacks in time of war. The cabinet will discuss it soon.

Paris, June 3 (AP).—Foreign Minister Bonnet tonight said France and Britain had joined in an appeal to Pope Pius to prevail upon Gen. Franco to cease aerial bombardment of civilians in government Spain.

The action was disclosed after Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate to the League of Nations, called on the foreign minister and presented a note asking France to act in the Far East as it had in Spain.

Japan Closes In on Key City ToLunghaiLine

Troops Within 10 Miles of Kaifeng; Americans Still to Be Barred.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), June 4.—Japan's drive on China's provisional capital in Hankow was progressing rapidly today.

The Japanese armies closing in on Kaifeng, key to the western half of China's fortified Lung-Hai railway line defending the northern approaches to Hankow, were within 10 miles of the ancient city while to the southward major Japanese forces were smashing westward to cut the southern stretch of the north-south Peiping-Hankow railway which crosses the east-west Lung-Hai line at Chengchow.

A Japanese army spokesman announced last night Japanese planes were flying over Chinese armies in the Lung-Hai railway battle area and dropping "surrender" certificates which promise good treatment to all Chinese soldiers who surrender to the Japanese with the forms.

Thirty Japanese airplanes, approaching Canton from over the Shameen Island foreign sector, today dropped 75 bombs on the congested areas of the city. It was feared civilian casualties would be extremely high.

Won't Let Aliens In.

Meantime the Japanese armed forces showed little disposition to go further in yielding to a demand of the United States that American-owned properties occupied by the Japanese be restored and Americans be granted full rights of travel, navigation and business in the conquered areas of this country.

A Japanese naval spokesman in Shanghai said bluntly:

"The interior will not be opened to foreigners until conditions permit."

These conditions, he explained, include restoration of complete order, organization of stable local governments, and consolidation of services to assure all normal civilized conditions.

He said the Japanese armed forces had declined to return properties of the Southern Baptist Mission here and to grant permits for a limited number of American missionaries to return to their posts in Nanking before the United States note of protest was received in Tokyo.

A Japanese army spokesman said last night that Japanese columns advancing on Kaifeng from the southeast were encircling the town of Chenliu. Other units were pushing westward from Lanfeng after relieving the constant pressure on Gen. Kenji Daihara's Fourteenth Division.

"Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek (supreme Chinese commander) is throwing some of his best troops into the Kaifeng battle, indicating that he has accepted our challenge for a show-down," the spokesman added.

The Chinese spokesman in Hankow admitted the situation around Kaifeng was precarious but said Chinese resistance would continue "forever."

United States consular officers in Shanghai said the return of the properties of the Southern Baptist Mission in the Chapei area adjacent to the International Settlement, and permission for 11 United States missionaries to return to Nanking were the only concessions made by the Japanese following the United States protest note to Tokyo.

Millions Mark 60th Birthday OfDr.Buchman

Many D. C. Residents Attend Oxford Movement Fete in Massachusetts.

In 50 nations, millions of men and women today will observe the sixtieth anniversary of a man few of them have seen but all follow in the greatest "practical Christian revolution" of modern times.

He is Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, founder of the Oxford Movement, who was born June 4, 1878, at Pennsburg, Pa. He conceived the philosophy which has become the Oxford Movement in an attic above a stable in the Philadelphia slums before the World War and began its practical application at Oxford, England, in 1921. Since then its principles of absolute honesty, absolute purity, absolute unselfishness and absolute love have captured the sympathies and loyalties of millions throughout the world.

D. C. Residents There.

In the United States the most important celebration of Dr. Buchman's birthday will be at Stockbridge, Mass., where more than 1,000 of his followers are gathered for the week-end. The meeting will open with a cabled message from their leader in London, calling upon America to "rearm morally."

Among Washingtonians attending the Stockbridge meeting are Mrs. William McClelland Ritter, of 2223 Massachusetts avenue; the Rev. and Mrs. Scoville Wishard, of 3807 Ingomar street northwest; Miss Jacquelin T. Smith, of Arlington, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Ely, of 240 Kalorama road northwest; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Marshall Brown, of 3061 White Haven road northwest; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, of 1717 Nineteenth street northwest; Mrs. Clara Franklin and Mrs. Robert Anderson, of 3744 Jenifer street northwest; Mrs. Carlton Putnam, of 3226 Klingle road northwest; Miss Sara L. Ensor, of 1631 Euclid street northwest; Miss May Hawes, of Southeast House; Mrs. C. S. Dow, of 3215 Forty-fifth street northwest, and Mrs. Richard Hadden.

The conference, which has been in progress since May 28, will devote the week-end to planning the next step in advancing the Oxford group's "spiritual revolution" in this country. A greeting will be sent from Stockbridge to London to be read with others from over the world at a birthday dinner to Dr. Buchman given by Lady Antrim.

Referred to by the political commentator of the London Times as "America's unofficial ambassador to Europe," Dr. Buchman has made the force of his philosophy felt in high places in England and on the Continent. C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian Parliament, said, "A new illumination has come to Norway and the whole mental outlook of the country has changed." Dr. J. A. N. Patijn, Dutch foreign minister, told 100,000 of his countrymen, "I have learned to see my fellowmen, the world and my whole life in a new perspective through contact with Dr. Buchman and the movement."

Got Inspiration Here.

The determination to put his philosophy of tolerance and honesty into practical effect came at the disarmament conference in Washington in 1921, Dr. Buchman has said. In his own words:

"I was present at the disarmament conference in Washington in 1921. In the face of that postwar chaos there came the conviction that what was needed was God-guided personalities, to make God-guided nationalities, to make a new world. It is that vision we are beginning to see realized today.

"Every nation wants to see the other nation changed. Everybody wants to see the other fellow changed. But everybody is waiting for the other fellow to begin. But I am convinced that if you want an answer for the world today the best place to start is with yourself. The only hope for every country is a moral and spiritual awakening.

"Human thinking, not inspired by God, is inadequate. It does not rise above the level of the problem confronting it. Only God-inspired planning can solve the tangle of human hates, and fears, and jealousies that bar the way to constructive action. The only sane people in an insane world are those inspired by God."

President Urged To Lift Arms Ban

A petition calling on President Roosevelt to lift the Spanish arms embargo was presented yesterday at the White House by Francis Gorman, president of the United Textile Workers of America; Dr. James Hibben, Bureau of Standards chemist, and Dr. D. N. Shoemaker, of the Society of Friends.

Signed by more than 2,000 Washington residents, the petition was received by Martin McIntyre, secretary to the President.

The delegation said the appeal was placed before the President, rather than the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, because Representative McReynolds "has ignored continuous appeals from all parts of the country for action."

Feared Mobs, Not Speakers, Says Hague Aid

Jersey City Safety Chief Explains Ban on 3 Congressmen.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., June 3.—Public Safety Director Daniel Casey testified in Federal court today he denied several Congressmen and others permits to speak in Jersey City "because it's not so much what the Congressmen would preach as it is how the mob that went there would take it."

"Mob psychology is a terrible thing," declared the boss of Jersey City's 2,000 police and firemen and a codefendant with Mayor Frank Hague against the C. I. O. and American Civil Liberties Union, which seek an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with their meetings.

Says Regiment Needed.

"When you draw a hostile crowd of 20,000 to 25,000 people, it would take a regiment of soldiers to stop them from committing riot, bloodshed and violence," Casey added.

It was to prevent this threatened violence, he said, he refused speaking permits to a number of applicants, among them Representatives Jerry O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana; Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, and Robert G. Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Casey said many persons had protested to him, individually and in groups, against letting the Congressmen speak, and violence against the would-be speakers had been threatened.

Questions Unanswered.

Still unanswered when the three-day-old trial was adjourned until Tuesday were two hypothetical questions put to Casey:

1. Judge William Clark's query whether Casey would prevent the Chief Justice of the United States from speaking in Jersey City if protests were made against his speaking and if Casey believed "bloodshed and riot" would occur.

2. A query by Morris L. Ernst, New York C. I. O. counsel, as to what Casey would do in a similar situation, but with Secretary of the Interior Ickes substituted for the Chief Justice.

In putting the question, Ernst said Ickes was "an active member of the American Civil Liberties Union, who made a speech at an A. C. L. U. dinner in New York."

Rules Committee Will Hasten Radio Monopoly Inquiry

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

The powerful House Rules Committee will give right of way to a resolution calling for Congressional investigation of monopoly in the billion-dollar radio broadcasting industry in order to assure its adoption before adjournment, it was learned last night.

An unofficial poll showed a majority of the committee in favor of the legislation, which would create a seven-man House committee to determine whether a monopoly "detrimental to the people" exists in broadcasting chains and stations.

The Rules Committee is scheduled to meet Wednesday in executive session to hear further evidence from George Henry Payne, member of the Federal Communications Commission, who charged that a group of radio lobbyists had "too greatly influenced" other commission members.

Senate Passes Recovery Bill; Vote Is 60 to 10

Spend

bill continued right up to the point of passage, when Byrd, of Virginia, tried to strike out the entire $965,000,000 PWA "pump-priming" title. He was beaten, 51 to 15. But it adopted by a voice vote an amendment by Byrd limiting relief administration costs to 5 per cent of total funds.

Two attempts were made to retrieve the loss suffered Thursday, when the Senate refused, 40 to 37, to bar officials drawing funds from the bill from political activities. Senator Burke, of Nebraska, called for a reconsideration of the close-losing vote on the earlier amendment by Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico. He said defeat of the Hatch ban was equivalent to giving officials the "green light" to make political use of the funds. Burke's motion to reconsider was defeated by a one-vote margin—33 to 32.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, offered a more drastic political restriction, imposing fines up to $5,000 and jail sentences up to three years for officials paid out of the spending bill who use their positions to influence or coerce votes. This was defeated by a 2-vote margin—35 to 33.

Last Limitation Out.

As a frayed and jittery Senate moved down the final lap of the fortnight's relief bill fight, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, succeeded in striking out the last important House limitation on relief spending—the Woodrum amendment requiring Works Progress Administrator Hopkins to stretch his funds over a seven-month period.

As weary Senators struggled late into the night, the Senate approved an amendment by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to pay all relief workers at a rate not less than $40 a month. This was adopted 41 to 27, hiking WPA wages in the South, now as low as $21 a month.

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, made a futile effort to legislate all emergency workers under civil service rules and regulations by July, 1939, but his amendment was defeated by a 43-to-29 roll call count.

Amendments by Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, giving veterans preference on PWA jobs, and by Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, requiring the Rural Electrification Administration to use only American products, were written into the bill.

Other Moves Beaten.

Defeated were amendments by Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, to provide outright PWA grants to those communities now barred by debt limitations, and by Frazier and Nye (Republicans), of North Dakota, to earmark $30,000,000 in WPA funds to provide water conservation in the "Dust Bowl."

The Senate turned thumbs down, 51 to 21, on a Republican proposal to decentralize relief and turn Federal funds back to the States for administration.

Advanced by Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, the Republican relief amendment drew support from seven Democrats—Bailey, of North Carolina; Byrd, of Virginia; Burke, of Nebraska; Copeland; Gerry, of Rhode Island; Holt, and King, of Utah.

Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, offered a series of unsuccessful amendments. Lodge's attempt to base relief allocations on unemployment needs, as reflected by United States Employment Service registrations, was shouted down. Another imendment by Lodge to increase old-age relief benefits under the social security act by one-third was tabled by a 39-to-30 roll call vote.

McAdoo Plan Wins.

Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, sponsored the lone successful earmarking amendment. Directing the WPA administrator to provide $50,000,000 for the Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase farm products and seafoods for distribution to the needy, the McAdoo amendment was approved 46 to 21.

Despite House consideration of a separate bill to increase Housing Administration lending powers by $300,000,000, Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, proposed the increased lending sum for housing as an amendment to the Senate bill. It was adopted.

A dispute over procedure on the housing legislation broke out in the House. Leaders there decided to abandon their own measure.

The Wagner housing amendment to the Senate bill would permit the Housing administration to lend 100 per cent of the cost of low-rent projects, but, on completion of the projects, the local agencies would have to repay 10 per cent of the loan before they could receive rental subsidy aid. Hitherto, local authorities have been required to put up 10 per cent of the cost, as contingent to the Federal loan.

Ten Per Cent Feared Gone.

The House committee waived the 10 per cent local contribution requirement for one year. When news of the Senate action reached the House, Representatives Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland, and Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, members of the House Banking Committee, opposed abandonment of the separate House bill.

Goldsborough is opposed to waiving the 10 per cent contribution requirement, and an amendment was to have been offered in the House to override the committee provision. Goldsborough argued that the Senate proviso was tantamount to eliminating all hope of 10 per cent being paid by the local agencies. He contended separate House action would provide permanent legislation, whereas the Senate housing amendment was attached to "temporary" relief legislation.

Early in the day the Senate sidetracked two monetary amendments by Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, and Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky.

The Bankhead amendment would have turned over to the Treasury all profits of the Federal Reserve banks in excess of 6 per cent of their capital, and required the Reserve banks to purchase from the Treasury enough bonds to pay the total spending bill cost. The Logan amendment was designed to have the Federal Reserve Board use its monetary powers to stabilize prices. Bankhead and Logan agreed to refer the amendments to committee for study.

Four hundred million dollars for loans from PWA revolving fund.

Two hundred and twelve million dollars for farm parity price payments to farmers up to 2 cents a pound on cotton, 10 cents a bushel on wheat, 5 cents a bushel on corn, 1 cent a pound on tobacco and one-fifth of a cent a pound on rice.

Increase in lending authorization for the United States Housing Administration from $500,000,000 to $800,000,000 with postponement of local 10 per cent contributions until low-cost construction is completed.

Six million dollars for the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration.

Thirty-four million dollars for general administrative expenses.

D. A. R. to Honor Jouett, Virginia's Paul Revere Hero

Charlottesville, Va., June 3 (AP).—It was 158 years ago tonight that Jack Jouett made his 40-mile ride over a rugged countryside to warn Thomas Jefferson and members of the Virginia General Assembly here that the British were coming.

This midnight jaunt, obscured by the lack of a Longfellow, is mentioned in but few history books and is all but unknown outside of Virginia. Jouett lies ni an unmarked grave.

The anniversary of the ride, held by some to have been of more consequence than that of Paul Revere, will be observed tomorrow by Daughters of the American Revolution at the Farmington Country Club. Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair, of Alexandria, newly elected State regent, will be the principal speaker.

Those responsible for the observance claim that the capture of the author of the Declaration of Independence, three of its signers, and Henry whose "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death" utterance was a factor in starting the Revolution, would have been a severe blow to the colonies. They also point out that the more famous Revere rode only about 15 miles over a good road.

Jas. Roosevelt Backs Wearin In Iowa Race

Iowa

Works Progress administrator indorsed Wearin, charged the latter with "fraudulent claims of White House support," and asserted he proved several months ago "to my personal satisfaction" that Senators Herring and Gillette were "highly regarded in officiil circles in Washington."

"I concluded at that time," he said, "that if the Democrats of Iowa considered it wise for me to seek re-election as Governor, that Senator Gillette's return to the Senate would be agreeable to the national Democratic organization and Administration."

Herring for Colleague.

Herring, too, in Washington revealed that he had cast an absentee voter's ballot for Gillette, but asserted he had taken and "will take no part in the Democratic primary except as a voter."

"My Democratic friends in Iowa have importuned me to learn for whom I have voted for United States Senator," he said.

"When my vote is counted next Monday, it will be found that I voted for my able colleague, Senator Gillette."

But on the floor of both branches of Congressfi the Iowa fight developed into a fiery issue that was promptly labeled "Conservatism versus the New Deal."

Herring, in line with his "hands-off" statement, refused to be drawn into the battle, but Representative Maverick leaped up to boost Wearin's candidacy and attack Senator Gillette who, he said, had accused him in a Dubuque campaign speech Thursday of "interfering" in the election.

"Since Mr. Gillette has brought my name into politics without any justification whatever, I should like to have something to say about that," he cried.

Laughter Drowns Protest.

Representative Biermann (Democrat), Iowa, raised the point of order that Maverick was violating Congressional rules by mentioning the name of a Senate member. After a wrangle over rules, Maverick was permitted to proceed provided Gillette's name were not mentioned.

Referring to the Senator as a "certain gentleman" and a "man who ran out on the Supreme Court bill," Maverick said that he knew Wearin as an "able, hard working, conscientious man—and I know another fine gentleman, an amiable corporation lawyer."

Leaping to his feet, Biermann angrily raised another point of order, saying that "while he has not named the man, he's described him so accurately that anyone could recognize him."

The rest of the protest was lost in a roar of laughter and applause.

Biermann Gets Tangled.

"I protest," Biermann resumed, "that it is entirely out of order to refer to a man whose heart has beat for the people since he was born as a corporation lawyer."

Maverick was cautioned by Speaker Bankhead against making a borderline speech.

"The people of Iowa know Otha Wearin as a farmer," Maverick said. "Maybe he is not very good looking—but that's because he's studied instead of smiled."

Gillette, tall and white-haired, is considered one of the Senate's most handsome men.

When the gavel fell at the end of Maverick's three minutes, he asked unanimous consent to continue for another minute but was blocked by Biermann's objection.

The Iowa primary fight has been a heated issue since Hopkins threw his support to Wearin. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, leader of the Senate anti-Administration bloc, bitterly assailed Hopkins' "interference" and predicted that the Democratic party would lose in Iowa next fall if Wearin were nominated.

Norris Balks Bone.

In the midst of the uproar over the Wearin-Gillette issue, a "left-handed" New Deal indorsement was accorded to Senator Bone, of Washington, when Senator Norris, of Nebraska, Administration stalwart, supported his candidacy for renomination. Norris, while listed as an independent Republican, speaks as a Roosevelt supporter and performed a similar service for Henry L. Hess, who recently defeated Col. Charles H. Martin for renomination in the Oregon primary.

It also was learned that Senator Tydings, of Maryland, would have no support from any Administration quarter in his contest with Representative Lewis. This information came from a source entirely out of sympathy with "reprisals" against Democratic Senators who have opposed Administration policies.

The President was reported to be searching the field for a strong candidate to oppose Senator Clark, of Missouri, who has the support of the Missouri Democratic organization for renomination. He was said to be willing to back Gov. Lehman if the latter wants a fourth term as Governor of New York. In the event Lehman declines, the Administration hopes it can persuade Senator Wagner to yield the Senatorial nomination to Representative Mead, of Buffalo, and accept the gubernatorial nomination.

down and the farm surpluses have brought to thousands of families the danger of going hungry in the land of plenty. The threat embodied in this grim paradox is the challenge which faces the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation."

He added that, pending inauguration of "industrial recovery measures now projected to bolster up city workers' income" and the "return of normal business conditions," the expansion of surplus purchases appeared necessary.

The Surplus Commodities Corporation has been spending $30,000,000 annually for purchase and distribution of farm products, principally those of a perishable nature. Among the Government's purchases in the past have been large quantities of cotton goods, which women on relief made into clothing for needy families.

25-Cent-Hour For Labor Bill Is Approved out for most of the hundreds of members who have vote in various ways on the bill.

Senator Allen Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, a Southern spokesman on the committee, was asked by reporters if differentials had been abandoned. Winking significantly, he answered:

"Not until the snow flies."

Several Southern Senators privately have indicated their intention to fight "interminably" for differential provisions, which they construe as favorable to the growing Southern industries.

Thomas repeated his warning that the House bill's inflexibility might lead to its overturn in the courts as unconstitutional, on the ground that an employer who considered himself oppressed by the payment of a statutory minimum wage might legitimately complain that he was being deprived of his property without due process of law. Thomas said:

"The Fifth Amendment is still in the Constitution, you know."

He admitted that this construction easily might be applied to the 25-cent minimum adopted. His contention is that the Senate bill's provision for review of a board decision in the courts, following hearings which determined the proper minimum wage for the affected industry, is more defensible in the courts than the House version. He further pointed out that in the entire history of the Supreme Court no board set up by Congress which had quasi-judicial powers ever had been declared unconstitutional.

Thomas repeatedly has taken the attitude that conference action must not be hasty, nor anything less than thorough, despite the pressure for adjournment. Determined that the measure must not fail of enactment after the lengthy reverse-studded legislative road it has traveled, he counseled patience again yesterday, despite leaders' plans to adjourn next Friday.

3 Runaways Exact Immunity by Mail; Then Head Home

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Three runaway youngsters whose disappearance caused an intensive police search, came home today after opening negotiations by mail for their safe return.

The parents of Charles (Sonny) Jonaitis, 10, and his sister, Betty, 8, received a plain postcard almost identical to one sent to the brother of John Helch, 11. The three children didn't come home from school yesterday.

"Can Betty and I come home and get some food and some clothes?" read the Jonaitis card. "If so, write yes or no on bottom and leave the card on the kitchen stove. P. S. If we come home are you going to give us a licking? Yours truly, Sonny."

The cards were mailed at a sub station only a block away.

Generals Resign Ecuador Cabinet In Border Crisis

By the United Press.

Quito, Ecuador, June 3.—The cabinet, composed of army officers, tonight resigned collectively to permit President Gen. Alberto Enriquez a free hand in reorganizing a civilian government to cope with the crisis created by Peru's "violation of Ecuadorian rights" in the disputed jungle territory east of the Andes.

The ministers resigned so they might return to their army commands "where their presence is necessary."

Meanwhile government leaders and ranking military officials met to consider Lima's reply to Ecuador's protest against the invasion of the disputed zone by 40 Peruvian soldiers who, War Minister Gen. Guillermo Freile asserted, killed one Ecuadorian and badly wounded another.

Tension increased here as Peruvian troops were reported to have been mobilized along the southwest frontier.

Way Is Cleared To $15,000,000 Slum Program

Alley

to the amendments to the Alley Dwelling act, and the President has signed the measure.

At the same time Straus announced that President Roosevelt had approved loan contracts totaling $57,577,000 for eight cities in the South, East and Middle West. This brings to $111,070,000 loan contracts signed between the USHA and local housing agencies for slum clearance and low cost housing projects.

Straus Stresses Speed.

At a press conference Straus said he hoped officials of the ADA would apply for the $10,000,000 as soon as the amendments are signed. He added that a contract for loan of the money should be signed within 30 to 60 days after the earmarking.

Straus estimated that a $10,000,000 loan to the ADA would give 3,453,000 direct man-hours of labor to workers here, or 23,000 man-years. In addition, it would provide 7,500,000 man-hours, or 5,000 man-years of labor indirectly.

The sum would be enough to construct 1,600 to 2,000 family dwelling units on vacant land. Family units on projects financed by the USHA average four rooms, including kitchen, bath, living and bedrooms.

Straus also declared that if Congress passes amendments to the Wagner-Steagall act, raising to $800,000,000 the amount the USHA can lend, the District on a population basis would be entitled to borrow an additional $5,000,000.

He said he was eager for a low-cost housing program to be started in the District, for slums here are as bad as any in the country and they have been sadly neglected for a long time. They are entitled to treatment the same as slums in other cities through borrowing from the USHA, he declared.

"Our technical, legal and financial staffs will be available to the ADA in selection and acquisition of sites, planning buildings and in other details the same as they are available to the 157 other local housing authorities," Straus added.

No Objections Likely.

No objections are expected in the House Monday when Chairman Palmisano calls up the ADA amendments. Both houses of Congress have passed them, but language of the Senate bill differs from that of the House measure. When signed by the President the amendments will increase powers of the ADA in three respects:

By allowing borrowing of funds from the USHA for low-cost housing projects.

By permitting construction of the houses on land outside inhabited alleys.

By permitting the ADA to borrow $1,000,000 a year for five years from the Treasury for slum reclamation work.

To Vacate Slum Areas.

Should several ifs come true, money borrowed from the USHA would be used to construct low-cost houses, principally on vacant land, and the money borrowed from the Treasury would be used to clean out slums in squares containing inhabited areas which are not suitable for home construction.

The eight loan contracts announced yesterday by Straus will provide 11,189 family dwelling units.

Cities involved were Baltimore, Allentown, Pa.; Buffalo, Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Birmingham.

Accompanying each loan contract was an annual contributions contract in which the USHA promises to make annual contributions of not more than 3½ per cent of the total development cost. These contributions will be used as subsidies to keep rents at prices slum dwellers can afford.

Rents on the projects will range from $3.75 to $4.25 per month per room, including water but not other utilities. Estimated construction cost per family unit ranges from $3,800 to $4,200.

The $16,616,000 loan contract signed by Baltimore gives it a housing program second in size only to that of New York City, which already has borrowed $30,000,000.

Cafes May Charge Girls for 3 Meals

The Minimum Wage Board yesterday ruled that restaurant employers may deduct the price of three meals per day from the legal wage paid waitresses, provided the employes' working hours occur between 6 a. m. and 9 p. m.

Climaxing several weeks of complaints received by the board from waitresses charging the employers were making illegal deductions from the minimum wage of $13.25 per week, the board rescinded a previous order and permitted the reductions.

In the case where a waitress works beyond 9 p. m. or before 6 a. m. not more than the price for two meals may be deducted from her wage. Employes who work part-time may be deducted one meal for each full three-hour period of employment.

The USHA Amendments.

With the announcement of slum clearance and housing projects in eight more cities, the United States Housing Authority has its program well under way. During the last three months the authority has lent a total of $111,070,000 to local housing agencies. The projects for which contracts have been signed will house 20,833 families now living in slums.

The USHA has gone a long way toward meeting the Administration's desire for acceleration of public works. Certainly it cannot be accused of any delay in the allocation of funds or the approval of contracts. To achieve this record, moreover, it must have had the co-operation of cities which are actually planning and building the housing projects financed largely by the USHA.

In the face of this progress arguments to break down the standards set up in the housing authority act have a hollow ring. There seems to be only one reason for the proposed amendment eliminating local contributions and permitting the USHA to advance 100 per cent of the cost of municipal slum clearance undertakings. It is designed to speed up this long-time program. But the response to USHA offers to date suggests that local communities have little difficulty in providing their share of the necessary capital.

As to the proposed increase in the amount available to the USHA for low-rental housing loans there would be little or no controversy, if it were not to be spent in a hurry as part of a pump-priming venture. With moderate appropriations for slum clearance over a period of years, the social value of that program would doubtless outweigh its costs. But if the USHA starts off with lending operations reaching $600,000,000 in a little more than a year, as now contemplated, the financial burden may lead to a breakdown of the entire program.

It cannot be too often repeated that this is not simply a case of Federal lending to stimulate business. Every dollar lent means larger annual outlays for subsidies. Under the house bill, for example, the annual contributions for which the USHA could obligate itself would be increased from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000. And those grants may continue for as long as 60 years.

If Congress is more interested in slum clearance than futile pump-priming, it will extend this proposed expenditure over a longer period than one year. Or, better still, it will permit the USHA to utilize the $500,000,000 already authorized before adding to its lending powers.

Fellows From Latin America.

The need of a better understanding between the United States and the republics of Latin America has long been admitted. But for too many years that idea remained in the realm of hope, little more than a banquet phrase. It is a heartening development, therefore, that an increasing effort is being made both in this country and in Latin America to transform the hope into a reality.

The latest of these ventures toward increased inter-American friendship through improved understanding has particular interest for Washingtonians, for it has its focal point at American University. That institution has just been granted $18,000 by the Rockefeller Foundation to aid in the Hall of Nations project already in effect to bring to Washington government employes of the Latin-American republics and permit them to pursue a course of study at the university and in the School of Public Affairs. The stay of these Hall of Nations fellows in the Capital will also provide them with an opportunity to meet and confer with American Government officials engaged in departmental activities similar to their own.

The grant, which covers a period of three years, will make it possible for the American University to appoint to its graduate faculty a specialist in Latin-American affairs whose special duty it will be to look after the Hall of Nations fellows. In additoin, the trustees of American University have established tuition scholarships for students nominated by their governments and selected by the Intitute of International Education of New York City.

The present Hall of Nations fellows hail from Brazil, Mexico and Nicaragua. But as the project develops and as its usefulness becomes known throughout Latin America there is every reason to expect the participation of the other republics as well. And as more and more Latin Americans become personally acquainted with the life, culture and institutions of the United States and as more of our citizens advance in understanding of the peoples and civilization of other parts of the Americas, the continuance and enhancement of inter-American friendship will be assured.

A Real Move For Peace.

The speech made by the Secretary of State in Nashville last night was as notable for its timing as for its content.

Three current developments make the present moment highly propitious for a constructive exercise of the enormous potential influence of this country in behalf of peace.

The first of these is that the Czechoslovak municipal elections have seemingly safely passed the point of international crises. The second constructive development is the now unanimous agreement of the non-intervention committee with regard to the evacuation of foreign "volunteers" from Spain. To this development must be added the intimations that both factions in the Spanish Civil War are beginning to consider a settlement of hostilities through mediation. Finally there is the evidence that Japan, obviously far removed from any decisive victory in China, is adopting a less intransigeant attitude in the Far Eastern conflict.

While there is no positive assurance of a turn of the tide in any of these three developments their cumulative force is considerable. They indicate that the high water mark of aggressive action may have been reached, and that those who have placed complete reliance in the efficacy of brute force are now disposed to take a more deliberative attitude. In any event, the situation richly warrants statesmanlike intervention on the part of the United States.

Such intervention Secretary Hull furnished last night. Particularly timely is his offer to "join with other nations in moving resolutely toward bringing about an effective agreement on limitation and progressive reduction of armaments." Such a move on the part of this country is doubly efficacious because of our demonstrated ability, and will, to create an overwhelming American military power if that is the inescapable world trend. Other nations, seeing that there is no bluff in this attitude, should be the more disposed to accept so co-operative an offer.

The further expression of willingness to join with other nations in rebuilding world trade and "in exploring all other methods of revitalizing the spirit of international co-operation" is equally impressive. Through the reciprocal trade agreements program this country has given ample evidence of its desire to restore the international commercial contacts which must underlie any stabilized peace. Mr. Hull's suggestion to extend this program into broader fields is really the more hopeful because no specified procedure is laid down. The will is expressed, and if that will is matched elsewhere the way can readily be found.

Secretary Hull addresses himself "at this crucial juncture of history" not only to the governments and peoples of other lands but also to those many Americans who are taking a fatalistic and negative attitude towards the world crisis. He has said many times before, but he now reiterates with an emphasis underscored by our military preparations, that "national isolation is not a means of security but rather a fruitful means of insecurity."

Every intelligent individual, whatever his nationality, realizes that the present hopeless trend in international relations cannot long continue without disaster. The threat of complete catastrophe cuts under differences in political philosophy, in national psychology, and in economic interests. Everyone knows that another world war, should the disaster come, would serve neither to make the world safe for democracy nor to relieve the pressures on the nations which consider themselves under-privileged. It could only result in such long-drawn and totally destructive anarchy as has been let loose in Spain. And there, in the release of hideous passions, in the bombing of crowded cities, and in the total collapse of all civilized standards is seen the dress rehearsal of what another war would be.

To turn the trend back, without indulging in vain recriminations of any kind, Secretary Hull made his speech last night on "The Spirit of International Law." He would have been derelict in his high office had he been less precise. It would have been impossible for him, as an opening move, to be more specific. Something which is very much more than a mere gesture is behalf of peace has been put forward by the Administration. By its reception in other capitals will now be determined the efficacy of this admirable move.

Uncle Nat.

The late Sir Thomas Lipton was known to virtually everyone in the English-speaking world as the man who spent a large part of his lifetime and an even larger part of his immense fortune in his efforts to win the America's Cup. Relatively few persons, however, even in this country, were familiar with the name of Capt. Nathaniel Greene Herreshoff, through whose genius Lipton was frustrated again and again.

Hardly any other two personalities, perhaps, would show profounder contrast than the genial, extraverted Irish tea magnate and the austere, taciturn American who designed the long line of triumphant cup defenders, beginning in 1893 with the Vigilant and ending in 1920 with the Resolute, greatest of them all. If multi-millionaire yachtsmen spoke of him as "Old Nat" it was with more awe than familiarity. He was no great respecter of persons, and if he was courteous to everybody, he was cordial to nobody, and it is said that he could sit through a Christmas dinner with his own large family without uttering as many as a half dozen words.

If the great cup defenders were the best known achievements of Capt. Nat Herreshoff and his blind brother, John, they were far from being the whole of them. This extraordinary pair introduced revolutionary innovations in marine engines and revolutionary advances in the design of torpedo boats. Nevertheless it is for their amazing creations in high speed sailing craft that they are most likely to be remembered. It is a strange irony that the age which saw the sails disappear, perhaps forever, from the commercial ship lanes should also have produced the fastest sailing craft the world has ever seen.

A New "Low" In The Senate.

When Administrator Hopkins recently violated his self-imposed rule against using WPA positions to influence voters, many apologists excused his unwarrantable action on the ground that he had spoken carelessly and impulsively. But there is no longer any need of defending Mr. Hopkins' interference in the Iowa primaries. The Senate has upheld him in that gross abuse of his official influence.

By a three-vote margin that body has defeated a proposed amendment to the relief bill barring WPA employes and officials from political activities in conventions, primaries and general elections. In other words the Senate has tacitly set the seal of its approval upon the utilization of a great public relief agency as a partisan political instrumentality, in the service of the majority party.

Hereafter it will be a waste of breath to charge Mr. Hopkins or his subordinates with "playing politics" with helpless individuals dependent upon WPA jobs. The WPA appears to have been officially recognized as an instrument of political power. If anybody is disposed to doubt this assertion, he will find abundant evidence to confirm it in the pages of the Congressional Record. All hope that the Administration is prepared to take a strong stand against political administration of relief agencies touching the lives of millions of Americans seems to have been dissipated by the speech of Majority Leader Barkley.

One's faith in the superiority of democratic, representative government is sorely tried by the failure of the Senate to repudiate the specious arguments by which the Senator from Kentucky fought to prevent elimination of WPA officials and employes from politics. His chief objection to the Hatch amendment was that it would shackle the WPA while leaving employes of State highway departments using Federal funds full liberty to "play politics." To Mr. Barkley, facing a primary contest with the Governor of his State, withdrawal from the fray of his WPA allies would unquestionably be a severe blow. Nevertheless, his open and selfish opposition to this proposal designed solely to protect the country against the political prostitution of its relief system comes as a shock.

Intellectually and morally the debate on the Hatch amendment descended to a very low level. Senators argued that WPA employes should have the same right to electioneer and engage in other political activities as they themselves have. Anybody who refuses to admit the fundamental distinction between the activities appropriate to an elected representative of the people and an administrative official appointed to relieve human distress lays himself open to charges of being either stupid or disingenuous. Yet such specious arguments were contributory to defeat of the Hatch proposal.

The outcome will be deplored by all Americans whose sense of political decency is still unimpaired. They will agree with Senator Hatch that "if we build up a system by which we can use funds from the public treasury to control the votes of the people of the Nation, it is no exaggeration to say that the moment that is done democracy in America is dead."

A Denver citizen was robbed of $177 in a revolving door. One can't be too careful in choosing the persons one goes around with.

Hippocrates Was Right.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

After 2,400 years of preoccupation with the common cold, the medical profession, as represented by the technicians of the Stillman Infirmary at Harvard University, has decided that the best treatment for this universal malady is to go to bed. As this was the treatment favored by Hippocrates, the results of all the scientific experiments which have been conducted since it was first promulgated can be represented by a single zero.

In the circumstances, afflicted humanity would be acting reasonably if it classified the cold as one of the inescapable phenomena of life and behaved accordingly. After all, though a bed is not the universal refuge it once was, it is not a bad place. Even when the concurrent dreams are troubled, they are no worse than the realities with which the conscious mind has to grapple.

Unfortunately, no such easy escape is possible to a civilization which has placed its faith in science. Though the heavens fall and every sinus cavity in Christendom be under attack from within and without, we will stick to the perpendicular and await the next draft from the laboratory. Brown mixtures, blue mixtures and green mixtures may have failed us; radiology, colored lights, massages, intravenous injections, overfeeding, underfeeding and steam baths may have touched everything but the right spot, but we are still hopeful. Some day the right chemical affinities will find each other and a sovereign remedy will arise from the test tube, like one of the benevolent genii.

Meanwhile, though we sniffle and explode every time there is a change in the weather, we remain loyal to our gods.

To Put Down Kidnaping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It seems that there is no way to prevent the crime of kidnaping by the ordinary laws of human behavior. Here is a suggestion which might be of some help. Let the authorities make it a felony to pay any ransom money to kidnapers. Then, immediately on the person being missed from his accustomed place, sound the alarm by radio, town crier, telephone, fire alarm. Get every available agency to work, then report to the police, having the search started as soon as it is humanly possible. When those who did the "snatching" are convicted of the crime, sentence them to Alcatraz for life, at hard labor, without reprieve, as long as they shall live.

To these criminals execution is not a terror, and they will take the risk, thinking they may be able to get away with their crime. But not so with Alcatraz! That cannot be bluffed off in a few minutes.

M. C.

Washington, June 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The American people are confronted with another great kidnaping crime and its horrible aftermath. A beautiful boy, not killed by war or disease, yet has been cruelly robbed of precious life and his parents plunged into grief.

I believe crime and human depravity are not merely national problems but are universal in scope and activity. International associations of various kinds realize this. But what can be done? I believe that ultimately a universal tribunal operating according to a revealed plan will be established, and from that supreme and glorious moment will begin to adjust and eliminate the world's awful dislocations.

The dawn is coming when the truth shall be known and a regenerate humanity, made humble by calamity, shall have divine courage to arise and establish the divine remedy.

Fair Taxation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The masterly article by F. Donald Adams in the Atlantic Monthly for January on "The Collapse of Conscience" is of particular significance and value at this time. Mr. Adams calls attention to a growing laxity in the character of public men. But it is of even greater importance that laxity in the moral character of legislative enactments should be corrected. Bad laws persist long after bad lawmakers are gone. Buckle has stated a most important truth in these words: "The best laws which have been passed have been those by which some former laws have been repealed."

Specifically, our present system of taxation amounts to a monstrosity which violates the moral code at every turn. It legalizes wholesale robbery of individual income and property, it has no respect for the sanctity of private property which it confiscates with the same disregard of the moral code that actuates the highwayman. Robbery is, of course, equally wrong whether exercised by an individual for himself or by a representative of the law for the Government. The income tax and the tariff are particularly culpable in this connection.

Precisely as in every business transaction, there is but one right basis for taxation, the rendering by Government of equivalent value in service to the taxpayer in exchange for the price paid. This is, by natural law, accurately fixed by the rental value of land and collectible by a single tax upon ground rent. All other taxes are essential robbery and should, therefore, be repealed.

No Armory In Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was much interested in the article in The Post of May 29 about how the good Senator King intends to make a tour of the country to pick up pointers as to how to improve the administration of Washington, D. C.

I'd suggest, humbly and votelessly, of course, that the Senator simply call on cities of the same relative size as Washington and then take steps to give to Washington what these other cities have.

He could start with the armories, for instance. That would be an easy route. Just start north, south or west from the District line, beginning at either Kensington or Hyattsville, and he'd find that every truck stop or flag station has an armory. The Nation's Capital, with its native sons showing war records better than most States in the Union, has no armory. It should be showing the way in national defense.

The Senator might take in foreign capitals and note that Washington is the only capital in the world that cannot stage the Olympic Games. It can't even stage the Army-Navy football game, which belongs in the Capital.

"The Old Laws."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have lived long and read much and it is hard for me to believe what I see on the public stage. Either we have discovered entirely new laws of economics or else we are headed down the valley of chaos and anarchy. Either science and history are meaningless or else we are foolish beyond belief.

Responsible, intelligent people of maturity have always believed that both labor and investment made industry; that industry produced the wealth to support our people, and that the government was a necessary burden to be severely kept within limits of power and pelf.

Today it is believed that labor only is worthy of its hire; that investment is a crime; that the Government is to take the wealth that ordinarily went to maintain industry and expand it; and that industry is a stupid foolishness that is to be hindered at every cost and eventually destroyed. It is only temporarily justified by the fact that the Government can regulate it and suck wealth out of it.

In the meantime money lies idle; men loaf; industry shrinks; and the Government super-bureaucracy expands like a rubber balloon.

There might be some justification to try the New Steal if the Government had discovered new or different sources of wealth to waste and squander on fatuous dreams. But unfortunately it seems to find only the same old eternal source of revenue—industry. The Government neither toils nor spins, nor does it create seed or tools. It plays with papers, regulates things it never dreamed, never created, and never managed. No matter how busy bureaucracy looks, nor how important it looks, it neither plants, cultivates, produces, repairs, transports, sells, advertises nor collects. It knows totally naught of these things; it could only fail at them, and yet it sits up like a wise monkey telling everyone what to do, when to do, how to do, and then takes away the money that everyone makes in spite of all this monkey business.

Government now has become a two-faced monster at war with itself. It keeps the old economy as a source of wealth to feed upon and yet it thinks, talks and acts as though it can go on with this dream forever.

Somebody soon is going to get one awful jar and it's going to be the public. We are going to find out once more in history that the old laws operate regardless of foolishness and monkey business. We will land right back where we started from, only we will be in an awful mess.

MR. HORSE AND BUGGY.

Washington, June 2.

Benes Of Czechoslovakia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is refreshing to see that there is at least one President of a democracy—Czechoslovakia—who is not afraid to call the bluff of the blustering Hitler and be ready to meet his force with force!

From the manner in which Britain has acted in the case of Mussolini's perfidy in Ethiopia, it would seem that the moral fiber of "the empire upon which the sun never sets" is beginning to crumble! It is to be hoped that this country will stick by its principles and refuse to recognize any country obtained by aggression and conquest. What a spectacle this League of Nations is making before the world in its spineless and ineffectual deliberations! It needs a few such men is Dr. Edouard Benes to resurrect it from its fishworm frailty and turn it into something that will be a power for peace, for which it was intended.

In these times of treaty-breaking and treachery of dictator nations, the only thing that is respected is force; and the nation which cannot show it, and mean it, will have to step down and out! Let us have peace by all means, but the only method to retain it is by something other nations must respect.

On "Country Club Churches."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In regard to the continuing discussion of "Country Club Churches," I agree that the nerve which was touched is very live indeed.

The inclosed poem is an embodiment of my own reaction to the discussion, which is not a new one but more or less constantly continuing.

EVERIL WORRELL MURPHY,

Credo.

I am a Christian, nineteen-thirty-eight.
I talk about the brotherhood of man.
Early at my Church doors, I leave them late,
Oft pondering my God's majestic plan.

God's plan—well, it has evolved me;
And I (in humbleness), rejoice that I am I.
God is—We used to think He made the sea,
The land, and everlasting sky.

God is—We're very modern, say, a Force—
Perhaps at first, an accidental chance.
But, ah! Although unseen, unknown the source,
Today's bright product crowns blind circumstance.

There lived a Man—so long, so long ago—
(Tradition says He lived—well, say He did)—
Who said things—Well, we surely better know
Truth now. The Eastern Star is hid

By smoke of commerce and of factories.
Our modern Christian Church enshrines hard fact,
Not visions—Streamlined theories,
With half-proved formulae of Science packed.

Life beyond death?—Immortal, living Soul?
I laugh the happy laugh of scorn set free.
And love and charity?—Not for the whole
Blind tribe; but, yes, for those who see with me.

See eye to eye; and—not too gently!—rail
When fools bow down to Resurrection morn.
Outmoded fools, who seek a Holy Grail—
Yet—Soft, let not Our Church be left forlorn.

Let calls to worship ring throughout the land.
Here are fine men (and modest) to admire;
Here give your money—freely; we have planned
A movie lecture, and a new Church spire.

Listen And Learn.

WASHINGTONIANS have one principal distinction — they are the world's best listeners. They started listening to Congressmen over a hundred years ago and, although they pay far less attention to them today, they still hear them. Then, as the Nation and city grew, they listened to the citizens of distant States and cities tell again and again of the wonders back home. They have listened to the foreign visitors patronizingly drop a good word for Washington, and to the returning overseas tourist who doesn't even do that.

This trait of listening well and learning much has made the native Washingtonian a shy and self-conscious being, but it has at the same time made him one of the best-informed taxpayers in the country.

First of all, he knows more about the weather, by and large, than any other American—not only Washington weather, but that of every other city and State. He knows more about it because that is the foremost topic of conversation of the visitor. He used to think that Washington had a pretty good climate, but he knows better now.

He has learned that Washington summers are the hottest in the country, with the possible exception of Death Valley. Of course, he reads the weather reports of other cities, but by constant repetition he has learned that while St. Louis averages 10 or 20 degrees hotter than Washington, residents there do not venture out of a summer's eve without a topcoat. Kansas may be a trifle warmer, but the lovely breezes fix that, and in time one doesn't notice the dust. And if he has any lingering doubts about the unbearable summer heat in Washington, he has only to listen to a Congressman tell of the sacrifices he makes for his country by staying here past May. Worn to a haggard shadow, he must get away for the summer; yes, he must go, even if he received only 15 cents a mile allowance instead of 20.

Only Hudson Bay offers Washington competition in winter weather. Of course, it does occasionally get down to 40 below at Helena and St. Paul, but the air is so bracing one doesn't mind not seeing the ground for eight or nine months of the year.

The other seasons are disgustingly humdrum here. No romantic fogs like San Francisco enjoys; no wonderful six-month rain like Tacoma's; no exciting hurricanes like Miami's; not even a second-rate Tulsa tornado. Here the sun shines on, not dimmed even by a dust-storm or cloud of locusts. Even our floods are distinctly third-rate.

So Washingtonians have given up on their weather. They know now that the District of Columbia is the only ugly blot on an otherwise perfect weather map of our country.

But despite their disillusionment about Washington weather, there here and there a native die-ha who, until a few years ago, thou that, notwithstanding its m faults, the National Capital ran pretty near the top among the ci of the world in the matter beauty. He thought the buildi and trees and parks and gene roominess and tidiness would hard to beat anywhere. That wa few years ago. He knows bet now.

For instance, he knows that ju here in America Washington is mo or less of a slum, compared to ou other towns and cities. A Philadelphian has told him that Rock Creek Park could be put in a corner of Fairmount Park and never be found for years. A Chicagoan will look over the Government buildings and say he ought to see the new post-office back home. The Capitol is all right, doubtfully agrees a visitor from Louisiana, but the one at Baton Rouge would make it look like a corncrib. A Baltimorean admits that the streets are fairly wide and surprisingly free of cobblestones, but they are so littered up by trees that he can hardly see the houses.

The returning traveler abroad finally removed the last lingering pride that the Washingtonian once had in his native city. He knows now that among the world capitals Washington is barely one cut above Addis Ababa.

He has learned that London Bridge, even though it is practically falling down, as the children have told us for years, is far more beautiful than our Memorial Bridge and much more romantic. And our worst alley dwelling can't hold a candle to the miles and miles of Limehouse slums.

He knew that the French couldn't get the Eiffel Tower down after the Paris World's Fair, but he had no idea that it was so much more inspiring than the Washington Monument. And the French have lovely neon advertising signs all over it while the Monument is as bare as the day it was built.

He always knew that you could smell an Italian city an hour before you saw it, but now he knows that this isn't the reason Rome is so much more delightful than Washington. No; it's the acres of rubbish and ruin that you are allowed to crawl over for a few lire—and right in the heart of the city, too!

And so, disillusioned, disfranchised but brave, the Washingtonian lives out his days amid the squalor and heat of his city, clutching to one meager straw of consolation—he is still the world's best listener.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

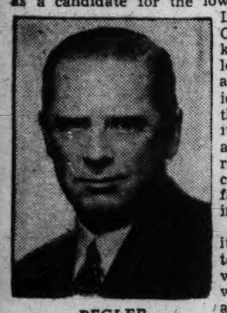
Man-Mountain Dean.

WITH THE campaign slogan, "I May Look Nuts and Act Nuts, but I Don't Think Nuts," Mr. Man-Mountain Dean is seeking a career in statesmanship as a candidate for the lower house of the Georgia Legislature for Gwinnett County. Mr. Dean is known to thousands of lovers of clean sport and admirers of manly physical grace and might in this country and the capitals of the Old World, and he writes your correspondent that he decided to court the people's favor because he has nothing else to do.



PEGLER.

To his many admirers it will not be necessary to recall that Mr. Dean was the one with the whiskers and the bulbous abdomen which looked and made squashy sounds as of a gigantic hot-water bag, who used to engage in desperate wrestling contests with assorted Russian Lions, German Barons and Masked Marvels in the large centers and, later, on the leaky roof circuit. His contests with the Masked Marvels were his best.

Mr. Dean, large and of forbidding mien with his tangled foliage, which gave him the appearance of a burst horsehair sofa, would attack the Masked Marvel with a great show of savagery. The Masked Marvel usually was smaller by several inches and perhaps 50 pounds and would suffer deep indignities at the hands of the Man-Mountain for perhaps 15 minutes. Mr. Dean would clout him on the back of the neck with vicious blows of his clenched fists, throw him over the ropes into the spectators' laps, twist his ears, sit on him and jounce and even insert his thumbs in the eyeholes of the little man's mask.

* * * *

THIS WOULD enrage some of the customers, and there would be loud cries of "Boo!" "Foul!" and the more chivalrous among them would threaten to leave their seats and avenge injustice by hand. Always some of them would resolve to wait outside the actors' entrance and gang the Man-Mountain if he should win. But the scenario obviated that.

For after the first phase of the struggle the Masked Marvel, made desperate by outrageous impositions, would haul off and fetch Mr. Dean a swift kick right in his large and undulating middle and flee in terror of his wrath to a corner of the ropes. Mr. Dean, with a wild whinny of rage, would take after him, and the Masked Marvel would seize the top rope, swing both feet off the floor and kick the Man-Mountain flush in the whiskers. Mr. Dean would reel back, dazed and baffled, shake his head and come in again, roaring fearsomely, just in time to catch another kick of both feet in his evil countenance.

Sometimes it took three such kicks, sometimes as many as four, to send the Mountain crashing backward to the floor, where he would lie, moist and heaving and emitting watery roars, like a beached whale, while the Masked Marvel, with a scream of triumph, leaped amid the voluptuous hummocks and folds of his torso to pin his shoulders.

Sometimes, when they had to catch a train, they would abbreviate the opus, but even in its curtailed state it was full of drama, strife and violence, and the climax was such that the patrons never mobbed the Man-Mountain at the actors' exit. Usually they felt a little sorry for a man so huge and sinister so abruptly and completely humbled.

* * * *

FEW, IF ANY, of the spectators could have known that behind the rather awful exterior of Man-Mountain Dean, there beat the heart of a simple American patriot, a home-loving citizen and devoted and faithful husband. Such, however, was the case, for Mr. Dean whose true name is Frank S. Leavitt, boasts of 17 years with the colors including the period of the war, and he writes Mrs. Dean as "my wife and pal."

A Hell's Kitchen youth but a man of the world, he wrestled on his own time while in the Army, served as a traffic cop in Miami during the great boom and, on losing this honored post, was guided back to wrestling by Mrs. Dean, to whom he owes his whiskers. For it was Mrs. Dean who urged him to grow them and to change his name by way of disguise, because under his old name and modest fame he was dated with the profession—a man of 39, and no star, either.

Mr. Dean, if elected, will preserve the whiskers and the United States Constitution, and from his acres in Norcross, Ga., this audacious Yankee invites old colleagues of the game, in which he looked and acted but didn't think nuts, to stop in when passing for a word, a loaf and, perhaps, a cup to Auld Lang Syne. All except, no doubt, Mr. Gene Fowler's wrestler, Mr. Claude (or Clawed) Nesselrode, who envied Mr. Dean's success and deliberately grew a mess of whiskers himself, an act which was protested to the Trade Commission as infringement and grossly unfair competition.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Board Meeting.

Chairman—Gentlemen, I address the board of directors today with renewed confidence. I have been given reassurances from Washington that the Government desires to give business every reasonable chance.

(There is a loud explosion.)

Director—Please go on. That was merely a Cabinet officer breathing into a microphone.

Chairman (resuming)—As I was saying, all reports from Washington are to the effect that the Government is whole-hearted for co-operation.

(There is a low rumbling noise, after which the ceiling collapses, showering the assembled businessmen with plaster.)

Another director—It is nothing gentlemen, nothing; merely a member of the Administration warming up for a radio address in West Virginia. Proceed.

Chairman—Ahem. There was a time when I felt pretty pessimistic about the future, but there are now signs on every side of a more tolerant attitude by Government officials toward business.

(The huge glass window behind him is shattered with a deafening noise.)

A third director—Keep your seats, boys! It's merely the vibrations from an address by a New Dealer extending the right hand of fellowship, with brick inclosed.

Chairman—There are portents everywhere of a more harmonious feeling between industry and Government. The President has assured the country that he wishes co-operation and is more than willing to do his part.

(With a sharp snapping sound, the north wall of the directors' room cracks open.)

A second vice president—Please, no nervousness! You ought to know by this time, gentlemen, that it is merely some high official of the Government getting into the full stride in a talk to the graduating class of Hicksville High School on the inherent baseness of the American taxpayer.

Chairman (now pretty weak and trying to hurry into his concluding paragraph)—And so I say to you, gentlemen of the board, that we face the future assured of a whole-hearted feeling of brotherly love, fair play, tolerance and good will. Washington has made it very plain that it wants to be our friend, that it knows Government and business must pull together as one team and that the need of the hour is confidence.

Voice (over the air)—My friends and neighbors.

(The walls crumble, the floors give way and the building crashes, carrying the directors into the wreckage, and seemingly pretty much resigned to it all.)

International Labor

Twenty-Fourth Session of World Conference Meets At Geneva Primarily To Consider Universal 40-Hour Week.

By Bertram Pickard.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE TWENTY-FOURTH session of the International Labor Conference which convened in Geneva this week met for the first time in the great assembly hall of the League of Nations. Geneva is asking whether political conflicts and controversies are destined to eclipse the International Labor Office as they have to a large extent the "political" league; or whether the fact that, in the main, the I. L. O. has been able to keep aloof from ideological and power issues, will result in this particular international institution weathering the storm with relative success.

Once again the question of hours of work occupies the center of the stage. This highly controversial issue has had a checkered career.

In the old days, the battle raged around the Washington (48-hour) Convention. Later, when unemployment was rife, the 40-hour week was mooted. In 1935, after fierce discussion, and despite everything the employers' group could do to block it, the principle of the 40-hour week was established. But, it was understood that the application of the principle would only be carried out industry by industry.

Glass Bottle Works First To Adopt Plan.

A START was actually made in 1935 in the matter of application, when a convention was adopted bringing glass bottle works under the 40-hour regime. In 1936 a further 40-hour convention was adopted for public works; while last year, after a tremendous tussle, in which the United States delegation played a decisive role, the 40-hour principle was extended to the textile industry.

But, in the meantime, the opponents of the 40-hour week had managed to prevent similar conventions being adopted with respect to several important industries, e.g., building and civil engineering, iron and steel, coal mines, printing trades and the chemical industry.

Thus, through bitter experience, the proponents of shorter working hours reached the conclusion that the industry-by-industry tactics were too costly in time and energy; and that, therefore, it was necessary to return to some wider policy designed to promote agreement concerning the reduction of hours of work in general over the whole field.

But, experience over the 48-hour week had proved, clearly enough, that any rigid limitation of hours of work on the universal plan, without taking into account the varying circumstances of countries and industries, was doomed to failure. Hence some intermediate form of approach was indicated, and the question thus appears upon the agenda of the conference in the following and delightfully vague form: "Generalization of the Reduction of Hours of Work."

To quote the retiring I. L. O. director, Mr. Harold Butler, "a thorough plan" must be worked out (though it is understood this year's conference will be able to make only a beginning) "for a methodical reduction of hours on practical lines, taking full account of the difficulties to be overcome."

It remains to be seen what this "thorough" and "methodical" plan will turn out to be; and whether the armaments race, not to mention the wars in Spain and China, will permit of the movement for shorter working hours developing as it would under normal conditions. But, assuming a major catastrophe can be avoided, there are a number of hints to be found in the reports on this subject presented to the conference by the I. L. O.

Farming And Shipping Excluded From Proposals.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, agriculture and shipping are ruled out of the discussion this year, so that consideration is limited to the field of industry, transport and commerce—broad enough to be sure.

Secondly, although the principle of the 40-hour week (gained in 1935) will be left intact, exceptions to the principle will apparently be countenanced. For example, a consultative conference on the coal industry recently met in Geneva under the auspices of the I. L. O. I understand it will be proposed that the conclusions reached by that conference should be regarded as the equivalent of a "first discussion" on hours of work in coal mines; in which case, the suggestion is that, although a 40-hour week would be the norm, a system of 11 shifts a fortnight, an equivalent of a 44-hour week, would be permitted for a transitional period.

Then, it is probable that hours varying from 44 to 32 will be considered for shops, hospitals, hotels and theaters where shorter hours would be difficult to apply for a variety of reasons.

Again, the "Regulation of Hours of Work and Rest Periods for Professional Drivers of Vehicles Engaged in Road Transport" stands as a separate item on the agenda. Here, apparently, a distinction is likely to be made between actual "driving time" and "employment time," the former perhaps being strictly limited to 40 hours per week, while the latter might vary between 44 and 52, according to circumstances.

It will be seen that elasticity is the order of the day. This applies not only to the number of hours worked, but also to the procedure by which it is proposed to "get a move on" so far as the application of any agreements arrived at is concerned.

For example, it is hinted that the 40-hour principle might be served even if, for a time (say a period of three years), a 44-hour week were to be generally applied. Again, that certain countries might be authorized to operate a higher general average, as was the case under the Washington Convention, it will be remembered, for India and Japan.

Further elasticity might be assured, it is hinted, by excluding very small establishments (say those employing less than six persons) from any agreements arrived at, or again by leaving it to each country to fix the number of weeks within which the average number of hours worked would conform to the figure agreed to under any particular convention.

And all the time, it must be borne in mind that overtime, under certain conditions, is agreed to in connection with each and every hours-of-work agreement reached. In short, the virtues and resources of flexibility are likely to be exploited to the utmost.

Vocational Education Will Receive Discussion.

A NEW ITEM on the agenda which illustrates the way the I. L. O. is constantly exploring new fields is that of "Technical and Vocational Education and Apprenticeship."

This question has come to the front for a number of reasons. For example, the lack of skilled men in certain industries today is not so much due to rearmament requirements as to the failure to train a sufficient number of apprentices during the depression. Again, modern industry has created a demand for highly skilled workmen possessing a wide range of technical knowledge. This implies a need for a higher general standard of education among workers. Yet again, the whole question of vocational training for re-employed persons has become one of great urgency, in view of the need for reabsorbing large numbers of unemployed persons in industries differing from those in which they were originally trained.

Indeed, as Mr. Butler has put it, "the whole question of industrial education is undergoing something like a revolution."

The important debate which always takes place in the conference on the director's report furnishes an opportunity to delegates to roam widely over the whole social and economic field. Not for the first time the declarations of the Japanese government representatives will be awaited with interest, not unmixed with anxiety. Remembering that both Germany and Italy have left the I. L. O. as a mark of their disfavor of Geneva, it remains to be seen whether the third member of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo anti-Communist bloc will stay alone within the I. L. O. fold, having been the first of the three to leave the League.

The I. L. O. has always had a reputation for impartiality in studying and assessing needs and tendencies in all parts of the world. This reputation served Mr. Butler and his colleagues well on their recent Eastern visit. I believe, moreover, that this reputation will only be enhanced by the sympathetic summary of impressions set forth in the report entitled "Problems of Industry in the East."

Though Japan was not actually visited, Japan's special economic situation and difficulties were naturally brought constantly to the deputation's notice. It would thus be reasonable to expect that Japan will think twice and thrice before retiring from an institution that has always given her fair play; and a forum where she has free opportunity in public discussion to meet the charge of "social dumping" that is so often brought against her.

Secretary Hull's Nashville Speech.

AT NASHVILLE on Thursday the Secretary of State emphasized old and familiar verities.

He spoke of the necessity of self-restraint in the dealings of nations with one another. He pointed out how essential it is, if war and disaster are to be averted, for nations to "accept and practice the rules of social conduct which are embodied in law."

The most important problem now confronting the human race, he said, "is that of establishing throughout the world . . . an unshakable regime of order under law." He inveighed against the "outworn slogans of the glorification of war" which are again "resounding in many portions of the globe and against the absurd concept that the United States or any other nation can, through an attempt to withdraw into its own shell, save itself from disaster.

Indeed, had Mr. Hull made this speech some years ago it would have been politely applauded as a statement of principles that nearly everybody accepted without question and would have been promptly forgotten.

* * * *

UNDER PRESENT circumstances, however, these time-worn verities have a surprising and startling freshness. For the fact of the matter is that in certain parts of the world not even lip service is being rendered to them. They are regarded as obsolete, outworn, decadent.

Events of the past few years have revealed an increasing disregard of international law and treaty obligations and the standards of civilized conduct. And the impact of the lawbreakers has had a terrorizing effect not only on their immedite neighbors but also on nations, such as the United States, geographically far removed from them.

In this country, for instance, large sections of the population have been so infected with defeatism regarding the world outlook as to have lost the capacity to think clearly and realistically. Like a man running away, they have been thinking with their feet, not their brains.

* * * *

NOR HAVE WE been alone in this. Trying to run away from realties has characterized the attitudes and policies of other democratic peoples.

Forgetting their basic strength, the great democracies have acted like weaklings. Not surprisingly this fact has been capitalized by the aggressive powers. They have won victory after victory not through any inherent strength but through the timidity of nations which have had the capacity but not the will to restrain them.

The upshot has been that the fatalistic feeling has grown that there was nothing that could be done to re-establish law as the basic factor in international life; that each nation should bury its head in the sand and hope against hope that when the inevitable storm sweeps over the world it will somehow leave that nation unscathed.

The aggressors have not been wholly unchallenged, however. Through no desire of their own but merely by the force of circumstance some nations have found themselves forced to stand and deliver. There was Ethiopia. But Ethiopia could not long withstand the impact of superior military force. There is republican Spain which after nearly two years is still managing to fight off the Fascist powers who have had such easy going elsewhere. There is China. And there is, a happier illustration, Czechoslovakia. In Czechoslovakia's case determined action prevented a disaster.

* * * *

AT NASHVILLE Mr. Hull did not go as far as did President Roosevelt at Chicago. The Secretary suggested no union of the democracies against the aggressors. He spoke of no "quarantine." No doubt this was due to the realization that while, as he said, the influence of the United States in support of international law was never more urgently needed than at present, American public opinion remains unprepared for any concrete action. The Secretary's speech was couched in vagueness. His speech was primarily an attempt further to educate the Nation regarding the world outlook and what is to be done about it. But it is also more than that. It also represents a promise and a warning.

It is a promise of American co-operation, essential in the effort to rebuild the battered standards of international law, to join with other nations toward an improvement of economic relations, toward disarmament, toward limiting the horrors of war and, most important of all, toward establishing a real regime of peace.

"We are prepared," said Mr. Hull, "to join with other nations in exploring all other methods of revitalizing the spirit of international co-operation and in making use of every practicable means of giving it substance and reality . . ."

And in saying that Mr. Hull was also sounding an indirect but nonetheless potent warning that the United States cannot be disregarded as a factor in world affairs, that too much stock must not be taken in isolationist sentiment or in such expressions of the panic state of mind as the misnamed neutrality law. The ultimate importance of that warning may prove to be great.

Gretna Greens Going

By William F. McDermott

Curbing Hasty Marriages.

"WHY DO YOU want a divorce?" a Chicago judge recently asked a pretty young bride of six months.

"Well, we were out on a party, had a few drinks, and some one dared us to get married. We made a flying trip to Crown Point. But he's brutal, gets drunk, and we're through."

"I see. More marriage mill grist. Forty per cent of the Gretna Green romances end up just like yours. Decree granted."

Another divorce court judge of the same city stated that one-third of all his cases were marriage mill products. Four Crown Point weddings blew up in his court in one day.

The high mortality rate among the usual impulsive, runaway, I-dare-you, drunken and surreptitious excursions to the domain of marrying parsons and justices is one reason why the Gretna Greens of America are rapidly vanishing. Another is the exposure of their racketeering methods.

For long years a few crusading souls have sought to have marriage laws grow up with the country. Now the break has come, thanks to Elkton, Crown Point, Reno, and other racket centers, which have focused public attention on the fact that it is easier in many States to get a marriage permit than a dog license. In the last year, however, nine States have passed restrictive marriage laws, making 27 States where it is impossible for marriage mills to operate. Several more States are expected to pass similar legislation this year.

The most effective lethal doses administered to Gretna Greens is the requirement of notice of intent to wed, which necessitates waiting several days between application for and granting of a license. Fourteen States, from Maine to Idaho, specify a five-day interval. Ten States make the period shorter, usually three days.

If Everybody Chips In

The Plymouth Historical Society has announced plans for a reproduction of the Mayflower, which on a wintry day in 1620 sailed into Plymouth Harbor with 102 Pilgrims and crew. The ship will be 90 feet long with a 26-foot beam. The plan is to anchor it permanently in Plymouth Harbor on the spot where the original Mayflower anchored, and visitors will be permitted to board the ship and see the actual conditions under which the celebrated voyage was made. Further plans include the re-enactment each year in the new Mayflower of the landing of the Pilgrims.

Funds are to be raised by voluntary subscription. The society is confident that sufficient interest can be aroused to secure the money.

The society's confidence is easily understandable. If every person who traces his ancestry back to the Mayflower chips in, enough money could be raised to build a battleship.

Officials Expect Lowest Federal Deficit Since '31

Shortage $1,412,022,204 With Month to Go in Fiscal Year.

By the Associated Press.

Treasury officials yesterday said the fiscal year closing this month would have the smallest Federal deficit since 1931, although the new spending program probably would triple the shortage next year.

With only a month's figures yet to check, the deficit, excluding debt retirements, was $1,412,022,204. Quarterly income tax payments, June 15, probably will bring the final figure close to the $1,338,000,000 deficit predicted by President Roosevelt.

In the preceding fiscal year, the deficit was $2,800,000,000. The record peacetime deficit was $4,700,000,000 in the 12 months ended June 30, 1936. Those figures, however, were swelled by soldiers' bonus payments.

Income Tax Sets Record.

The deficit was reduced in the current year by record income tax collections. Next year, the Administration proposes vastly increased spending for public works and "pump-priming," and anticipates a slight drop in revenues.

In the first 11 months of the fiscal yeaer, the Treasury took in $5,467,713,250, including $2,084,907,110 of income taxes, $2,094,700,485 of excise taxes and $599,551,538 of social security taxes.

Comparable figures of the preceding year show total receips of $4,426,140,342, including $1,610,412,463 of income taxes, $1,971,459,262 of excise taxes and $444,641,051 of social security taxes.

Expenditures Up 178 Million.

Expenditures of the past 11 months totaled $6,879,735,455, compared with $6,701,659,561 in the comparable period last year.

Officials explained that the apparent increase in expenditures resulted from a decrease in revenues of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. RFC transactions are entered in the budget only as a net charge of credit against general expenditures.

Thus, in the past 11 months, an excess of loans over collections by the RFC caused a $62,021,328 addition to budget expenditures, while in the similar period last year the agency had a $341,627,725 excess of collections over loans which was deducted from budget expenditures.

Howard U. Cadets Stage Final Drill

Final Inspection of the Howard University R. O. T. C. unit was held yesterday at the university stadium, with Col. Robert Weatherhill, R. O. T. C. inspector, Third Corps Area, reviewing a series of battalion, company, platoon, squad and individual competitions. A medal for military efficiency was awarded Maj. Halley B. Taylor, 1715 First street northwest.

Winner of the company competition was A Company, Capt. Frederick E. Davidson commanding. The platoon drill was won by Lieut. James T. Tolliver, and the squad drill by Sergt. Joseph P. Martin. Individual honors were accorded Robert H. Ewell, who was winner also in the 1937 competition. Robert A. Hicks received the first basic award.

In saber competition honors were won by Lieut. Washington E. Garner. The minor "H" was awarded to rifle teams of men and women and marksmanship medals were presented to 75 basic students. Judge of the competition was Lieut. William R. Crawford, Twelfth United States Infantry.

Former Detective Gets Law Degree From Shot in Arm

A bullet from the gun of a fellow officer three years ago is responsible for the law career of retired Detective Sergt. James E. Kenney, 3347 Eighteenth street northwest, who is among 200 graduates who will receive law degrees from Columbus University next Thursday.

Kenney is graduating with high honors in his class.

On the night of June 9, 1935, Kenney was on duty at Detective Headquarters when he was dispatched to Eleventh and E streets northwest to investigate a reported burglary.

As he moved down a dimly-lighted apartment corridor, a patrolman from the Second Precinct mistook him for the prowler and opened fire. His first bullet hit Kenney's elbow, shattering two bones and severing nerves controlling his wrist and hand.

Kenney was retired from the department. That September he enrolled in the law school.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Notes.

The American Federation of Government Employes bears down hard on the practice (not unkown) of Federal workers mingling too greatly in political affairs. The Government Standard asserts editorially: "There is an old adage which says 'Stick to your last,' and this, the A. F. G. E. does under a constitutional mandate, the editorial continues, but appends these lines for whom it may concern: "A Government employe organization, labor union, recreational association, dramatic group, or whatever it may be, has its definite place in the scheme of things. It should fill that place to the best of its ability and not go beyond it . . ." And, otherwise, our best field agent flashes:

The United Government Employes, Inc., a colored organization headed by J. Edgar Brown, made an impressive presentation of facts as to training household workers on relief for private jobs in American homes the other day before the Deficiency Appropriations Committee . . . And Senator Adams immediately stressed that funds should be allocated in accordance with Brown's suggestion . . . The law says a judgment in the Municipal Court against a Federal employe whose only income in the majority of instances is his Federal salary is O. K.—and nothwithstanding that when this judgment is secured the salary of a Federal employe cannot be garnisheed . . . Congress, we hear, is contemplating pressure on department chief clerks who try to act as bad debt collecting agents, and business houses should learn it is not a good idea to grant credit far beyond the purchasers' paying power.

25,000,000 Checks.

Through the efforts of Representative R. B. Wigglesworth (Republican), of Mass., rental and benefit contracts under AAA regime have finally been relinquished to GAO for audit. There are 25,000,000 payments, which the Audit Division expects to complete by June 30, 1939. These represent payments made by AAA during a period of four years . . . Uncle Sam plans to aid towns and municipalities in construction projects by lending $1,000,000 without interest.

Representative David J. Lewis, of the Sixth (Md.) District, who will run against Senator Millard J. Tydings, has many Federal employes among his constituency in Montgomery County. What will hurt Tydings more than being anti-Administration is the closing of his office doors to constituents back in 1933 . . . Representative Stephen Warfield Gambrill (Democrat), of Maryland, was observed as very tired-appearing when he came to a meeting the other night; re-election time makes them all look weary.

The Senate has made a change in administrative expenses for continuation of emergency jobs, revised in the relief bill, as follows: GAO, $4,180,000; Treasury—Procurement, $5,500,000; Disbursement, $3,500,000; Treasurer, $750,000; Secret Service, $300,000; Accounts and Deposits, $8,000,000, for a total of $18,050,000, and Air Commerce, $325,000. Final figures will be determined in conference some time next week.

Veterans' Aid.

The proposal for a policy of favoring war veterans in WPA work has been adopted by the Senate. This followed a plea from Millard W. Rice, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars . . . At the end of March, 1938, there were 447,000 veterans registered with public employment offices as being out of work. At the beginning of the year, there were 237,000 similarly registered. It is believed that there are now 500,000 unemployed vets.

The following doctors entered the Public Health Service recently as assistant surgeons: Francis J. Weber, Thomas R. Dawler, Thomas H. Diseker, Theodore F. Hilbish, Robert D. Duncan, James Watt, George R. Tooley, jr., Robert L. Zabel, Thomas F. Graham Raymond F. Keiser, Glen S. Usher, Charles C. Smith, William N. Donovan, Wendell A. Preston, Murdo E. Street, jr., Edgar B. Like the policeman, a biological survey game agent's life is not a happy one. You may have read the other day how a Wenona, Md., man was soaked to the law's full limit for trapping and possessing wild ducks in the closed season. Mighty Hollywood Figure Here, Delightfully Ordinary Fellow

Henry King, Director With Personality Like Competently Darned Sock, Pauses for Sandwich and Is Gone With Unassuming Wind.

Washington was host Thursday to one of Hollywood's greatest figures, but no one knew it except the plane dispatcher at the airport and three or four others.

Setting down his Waco sports job (350 horsepower) as neatly as he puts Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and other movie stars through their paces, Director Henry King descended from the skies for a barbecued beef, some weather information and a brief gab session with Sam Wheeler, local branch manager for Twentieth Century-Fox Pictures.

To be truthful, Washington really wasn't host to King, unless one wishes to assume the airport is in the District, because the field lies inside the 1791 high-water mark of the Potomac, because he didn't leave the port except to get that beef sandwich.

In any event, the fellow who directed "In Old Chicago," the forthcoming "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and such famous silents as "Tolable David" and "The White Sister" turned out to be just about the most delightfully un-extraordinary guy ever to come out of the film capital.

A former Army flier, he never wears a parachute, "because I prefer to stick by my ship and bring her down, one way or another."

Born and bred in Christiansburg, Va., a pin point on the map near Roanoke, he planned to dip in salute to the old home town on his way down to Charlotte, N. C., his goal last night.

Nearly always surrounded by beautiful girls on the studio lot, he still got a big kick out of the invitation to be judge in the Birmingham air show contest this week-end to pick "Miss American Aviation of 1938." (Note: He took the job.)

His orange-nosed plane is named "Martha Ellen IV" in honor of his 7-year-old daughter. This is the fourth ship he's named Martha Ellen.

Having just completed "Alexander's Ragtime Band," King is taking a vacation before starting work on a picture based on the outlaw career of Jesse James. He stopped over in Indianapolis for the automobile races Memorial Day—a few weeks earlier he had flown to the Kentucky Derby—and then continued on to New York.

Now he is heading for Florida and a bit of tarpon fishing.

As unspectacular as a quart of milk, he might more readily be taken for a Sunday school teacher or an insurance salesman than for a high-powered film master, responsible for $2,000,000 productions. The Army taught him to fly in 1918 and one of his life's regrets is that the World War shut down before he was sent overseas. King carries a private pilot's license.

After 105 minutes on the ground, which is approximately the length of one of his feature pictures, he climbed into his sports job and bade farewell to Sam Wheeler.

"What a man!" sighed Sam, as Martha Ellen VI picked her three wheeled legs off the ground.

Fire Sergeant Bunn Wins Lieutenancy

Sergt. C. K. Bunn, of No. 5 Truck Company, yesterday was appointed lieutenant. The new appointee will take his post this morning at the No. 25 Engine Company, filling a vacancy created by the retirement of Lieut. E. J. McNerhany. Bunn has been with the Fire Department 17 years.

Private W. H. Ronan, of No. 16 Engine was promoted to be sergeant to fill the vacancy created by Bunn's promotion. His salary is $2,600 per year.

John F. Lieb, Donald D. Ritchey, John E. Worden and Leonard G. Porter were appointed privates.

Union Asks Locher For Commissioner

The Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance yesterday indorsed John Locher, president of the Washington Central Labor Union, for District Commissioner.

Efforts to "destroy" the National Labor Relations Board were condemned by the union, which charged that attacks on the board are "really attacks on the right of labor to organize."

Lochr "has shown himself constantly vigilant for the welfare of the entire community and has proven himself a stanch supporter of the rights of the working man and woman," said a letter sent by the alliance to President Roosevelt.

Aiken Likens Relief Policy to Carpetbag Era

Vermont Governor Calls 'Central Vs. Local' Control Issue.

By the United Press.

Audubon, N. J., June 3.—Gov. Aiken (Republican), Vermont, likening New Deal relief policies to the carpetbagger regime of post-Civil War days, tonight urged creation of business activity as a "real alternative" to defeat unemployment.

Outspoken critic of the New Deal and proponent of a purge of reactionaries from his own Republican Party, Aiken outlined the "tragedy of relief" to the Camden County Republican Club here.

Realization of the "real alternative" through Government and business co-operation, Aiken asserted, cannot be accomplished without a change in the Administration. That change, he said, depends upon the relief worker's vote by which he would determine whether he wants continued relief or a real job.

Decries "Humiliation."

Decrying the humiliation "forced" upon those who formerly held jobs paying a livable wage, and who now must "patch together an existence on $12 a week," the Vermont Governor said:

"We do not have to be very deep students of economics to know that a high standard of living for people depends upon high productive capacity for the workers and high purchasing power in the hands of the laboring class. More and more goods for more and more people can be assured only by this.

"Each time the relief burden is increased this problem becomes more acute. We have a Government preaching the more abundant life and at the same time perpetrating a system that violates in all its principles the laws which govern our economic well-being as a Nation."

Wants Confidence Restored.

Aiken, believing relief projects and pump-priming cannot even remotely restore prosperity and employment which would result from normal business activity, said:

"We all know pretty well what is necessary in America to bring about this expansion of employment. Our need is sincere co-operation between Government and industry. That alone means a restoration of confidence. That alone would enable men and women, now suffering the humiliation of being branded as incompetent and destitute, to again enter the ranks of industry.

"I do not dispute the assertion . . . that confidence and harmony between Government and industry cannot be restored without a change in the Federal Administration."

Sees "Dynamite."

Contending that the issue was "centralized versus local control of local (relief) affairs," Aiken charged:

"The setting up of an over-all control that is no respecter of sectional and regional problems carries with it all the dynamite the Civil War reconstruction held. Certain parts of the South still rankle in bitterness, and justifiably so, at the methods of the reconstruction.

"Control after the Civil War was imposed by the victorious North working through carpetbaggers, cheap politicians and the use of force. That was an instance of control exercised without regard for local needs and conditions and carrying humiliation with it."

Hermit Sought In Levine Boy's Kidnap Slaying

caught by powerful currents and swept directly to the point where the youthful kidnap victim's mutilated body was found, on the rocky shores of an estate owned by Mrs. Lewis Iselin, approximately three miles from the home of Peter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Levine.

Planes Join Cash Hunt.

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, Fla., June 3.—Federal agents fruitlessly ran down half a dozen new leads in the kidnaping of little Jimmy Cash today as search for the boy extended south to the tangled morasses of the mangrove keys. The 5-year-old boy was stolen from his bed Saturday.

Naval planes from the Miami reserve base joined the hunt by authority of the Navy Department in Washington, and the case appeared far from solution as the Federal Bureau of Investigation released three men who had been questioned.

Willard and John Campbell, brothers, and John Manuel, colored, were permitted to leave the FBI headquarters at Miami. John Campbell said he bore no malice toward the G-men and donated a truck to aid in the search.

State police and Federal agents of Indianapolis tonight searched northwestern Indiana after receiving reports that the kidnaped boy had been seen at Fowler in Benton County Indiana.

Mrs. Ben Ladd, of Fowler, told Sheriff Amos Senesac that she saw a boy who resembled photographs of the Cash child, with a "dark complexioned man who seemed to be a foreigner" this morning. The man and boy, she said, were picked up by a passing motorist and headed north.

Mrs. Cash in Bed.

J. Edgar Hoover, directing the search after bringing in 14 more agents by plane, spent the day at the FBI office apparently supervising examination of clues such as the three ransom notes and the shoebox in which James Bailey Cash, sr., paid the $10,000 demanded.

Hoover said his presence here was only to co-ordinate the investigation and did not imply that a "break" was in sight. He said a number of "volunteer witnesses" had been questioned and more would be examined but no one had been charged with the crime.

Hoover made his first visit to the kidnap scene tonight. He remained at the F. B. I. field office for an hour, visited the Cash home briefly and drove off in the direction of Miami, without comment.

Cash left his frame apartment house for the first time since he vainly delivered the ransom for his son Tuesday to inspect with authorities a decomposed object in a burlap sack which a colored woman found on a dump. It turned out to be a dead dog. Mrs. Cash was in bed under the treatment of a physician.

Bloody Glove Found.

Another flurry was caused when Mary Frances and William Howard dressing, 'teen-aged sister and brother, of Tavernier, 40 miles south, found a blood-stained glove under a heavy rock and a child's building block nearby on the edge of a water-filled rock pit. Divers were summoned but their search was fruitless.

The children related they had seen a blond little boy with a woman and four or five men in the vicinity Wednesday.

Searchers determinedly carried their heart-breaking hunt into the uncharted Everglades wastes of the Cape Sable region on the southern tip of the Florida mainland, a combination of thick tropical growth, flat grasslands and a network of small streams. The Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico meet at the cape and in some spots it is difficult to discern the shoreline in the watery mangrove clumps.

Preston Bird, former Mayor of Homestead, who is directing the search, said that along with the Navy planes, private boats and about 200 men, most of them familiar with the wild area, were participating in the Cape Sable hunt.

He said 640 men in small groups searched the area immediately south of Miami. The vicinity of Princeton had been thoroughly combed in the previous two days.

$30 Clerk Had $2,500,000 and Never Knew It

Alleged Looter's 'Dupe' Is Mildly Pleased He Was So Rich Last Fall.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—A $30-a-week salesman heard to his astonishment today that $2,500,000 worth of securities were assigned to his name without his knowledge last fall while he was nominally secretary of the First Income Trading Corporation, an investment trust.

(Six men have been indicted and four of them arrested in connection with an alleged securities fraud involving the First Income Trading Corporation. Those arrested are Vincent E. Ferretti, New York lawyer; Philip H. Frear, Washington securities dealer; Ralph H. Robb, Boston lawyer, and S. Leo Solomont, New York lawyer. Frear, arrested in Washington, will have an extradition hearing on June 30.)

The salesman, John McKay, looked puzzled, then mildly pleased when David Schencker, counsel for the Securities Exchange Commission, conducting a hearing into investment trusts, explained the matter. The securities were the property of the Continental Securities Corporation, one of seven trusts allegedly looted by the six indicted men.

Hired On the Side.

McKay, employed as a salesman for five years, said he was engaged on the side at $25 a week to act as vice president and director of First Income, a job he resigned to become secretary.

He signed three or four papers a day, he said, and didn't always know what he was signing.

"Did they tell you," asked Schencker, "that they were going to assign you $2,500,000 worth of stock of Continental Securities, and that you would have the discretion to sell it until you realized $700,000?"

$5 for $16,000,000.

McKay frowned slightly, shook his head and smiled.

"No, sir," he said. "I understand the mechanics of it now, but I did not then."

The men under indictment, according to Dewey, formed a company, the Fiscal Management Co., Ltd., with an original $5 capital outlay, and contrived to get control of the seven trusts, with $16,000,000 combined assets, by using the marketable securities in the trust portfolios to negotiate loans which they used in payment for the stock of the trusts themselves.

The hearing was adjourned until next Wednesday.

Woodring Asserts Tariff No Longer Is Political Issue

St. Louis, June 3 (AP).—Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring told St. Louis businessmen today that "the only practical way to stop the exportation of American capital and American initiative is to make it more profitable for both to stay at home."

He declared that "uneconomic tariffs and excessive nationalism" had caused much of this country's permanent unemployment because of "the forced investment of millions and millions of dollars of American capital in foreign manufacturing plants to the detriment of American labor."

"But the tariff is no longer a political issue," the Cabinet member asserted in an address before a chamber of commerce luncheon. "Nobody proposes unrestricted trade or even a sudden, drastic reduction in the tariff. Everyone should realize that freed—not free—trade is essential to the restoration of industrial, political and social health in this country and the world."

Freeman Talks At Howard U. Stone Laying

Calls Education Essential to Security; Dormitory to Cost $500,000.

Education is essential to national progress, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, said yesterday at cornerstone-laying exercises on the site of Howard University's new $500,000 men's dormitory. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard, presided and the cornerstone was placed by Ebert K. Burlew, First Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

"This occasion," Bishop Freeman said, "marks a distinct advance for Howard University. The allocation of Federal funds for purposes of education is to be highly commended. In this connection it is highly fitting that this university receive consideration for proper development of the citizen and the State through its influence.

Stresses Obligations.

"For, with the learning here gained, come obligations and responsibilities of the citizen in relation to the community. If the Nation is to continue, it must go on through the agency of men and women who are educated. A nation of ignorant men and women is menaced. It is imperative that fresh emphasis be laid upon the position of education in our security of life, and liberty, and in the pursuit of happiness. I congratulate Howard University upon the acquisition of this building calculated to further develop our citizenry toward concepts, ethical and moral."

Dean William B. West of Howard spoke on behalf of the college and traced its efforts over a period of 15 years to secure the new building.

The dormitory will be constructed under the supervision of Robinson & Williams, architects, and officials of the Interior Department, with a grant from the Public Works Administration. It will take the place of David Clark Hall, constructed 64 years ago, discontinuance of which as a dormitory was recommended in 1928.

To Contain 198 Beds.

The new building became a project of the Park and Planning Commission in 1935, and work was begun in the following year, when the architects traveled throughout the country in development of their plans. It will contain interdependent units, dining rooms, clinical facilities, 198 beds in single and double rooms, guest rooms and lavatories. The architecture is of the Georgian type, in conformity with other new buildings on the campus.

The cornerstone contained the president's report, a university catalogue, a Journal of Negro Education, copies of the Hilltop and the Stylus, a reprint of an address by former Representative Louis Cramton of Michigan, historical facts about Clark Hall, a copy of President Roosevelt's address at dedication of the new chemistry building, as well as a copy of Secretary Ickes' address on the same occasion, and other special documents.

House Group Acts To Allow G-Men More Than Asked

By the Associated Press.

A House appropriations sub-committee yesterday acted to give financial aid to the G-Men.

Legislators said the sub-committee had recommended an even larger appropriation than the $234,000 requested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation to prevent pay roll deficiencies and construct a new target range.

President Roosevelt recently asked Congress to give the bureau $108,000 for salaries and expenses for the balance of this fiscal year.

Additional funds were included in the final deficiency appropriation bill on which the sub-committee completed work yesterday. It is scheduled for House debate Tuesday.

It was learned the bill would carry a total of approximately $270,000,000. This represented a substantial reduction from the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau.

10 Killed, 25 Hurt In Franco Air Raid On Loyal Seaport

Madrid, June 3 (AP).—Ten persons were killed, 25 wounded and 15 buildings destroyed tonight in an insurgent air raid on Tarragona, Spanish government seaport, on the Mediterranean.

It was the first recent insurgent raid in which incendiary bombs were reported used.

[The Barcelona correspondent of the London Exchange Telegraph Agency reported the loyalist capital had been raided by Nationalist planes for 30 minutes, the United Press said.—Editor's note.]

Meanwhile Spanish insurgents fought desperately as government defenses blocked their Teruel-Mediterranean offensive. Galicians tried to batter their way into Western Castellon Province, but made little progress.

State Acts to Ban Milk Price Cuts

Norfolk, Va., June 3 (AP).—Approximately 40 milk distributors in the Norfolk-Portsmouth area will face injunction proceedings in a Richmond court next week in what counsel for the State Milk Commission described as a move to halt "wholesale" price cutting.

Maj. Edwin H. Gibson, assistant attorney general, said here yesterday the suits, to be filed simultaneously, would be based on the commission's investigation of adherence to its price regulations.

Today's World Likened to Era Before Flood

Adventists Hear Mankind Faces 'the Greatest Crisis in History.'

The world today is comparable to the world in the time of Noah, just before the flood, the Rev. John W. MacNeil, president of the Potomac Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists, declared yesterday at the 10-day camp meeting on the Washington Missionary College grounds at Takoma Park.

"We face today the greatest crisis in the history of mankind," he said. "All the past pales before the stupendous issues of this mighty hour."

He pointed to the increase of crime, corruption and a general social breakdown as signs of the approaching end of the world and warned his hearers "to be ready at all times to escape the judgments that are coming on the earth."

Membership Rises.

In his annual report, the Rev. Mr. MacNeil said membership of the conference had nearly doubled in the past 10 years. The tithe, paid into the treasury in the past 2 years, increased $23,000 a year, the total for the biennial period being $371,359. He reported that $117,625 had been given for foreign missions.

It was announced that the Potomac Conference holds the world record for its contributions to missions. Members of the Potomac Conference, Mr. MacNeil said, gave an average of 50 cents a person in 1936 and 48 cents in 1937. The individual goal is 40 cents a week.

Four new churches were accepted into the conference at the first business session yesterday. They are situated in Appalachia, Va.; Luray, Va.; Glen Echo, Md., and Staunton, Va.

The Rev. H. J. Detwiler, head of the Columbia Union Conference, was named chairman of the nominating committee, which will bring in a slate of new officers of the Potomac Conference in the next several days.

Largest sessions of the conference are expected to be held today and tomorrow when Adventists from nearby Maryland and Virginia will attend.

The Sabbath-day program today includes an account of mission work done in Africa by the Rev. Detwiler and addresses by Prof. J. P. Neff, of the Columbia Union, and Prof. Leo Thiel, of the English department faculty at the Washington Missionary College.

The Rev. F. J. Gilbert, a former rabbi, will speak at 11 a. m. today, and the Rev. F. H. Robbins, president of the Ohio Conference in Mount Vernon, Ohio, will preach at 8 p. m.

D.C. Flagpole Painter Draws $8 An Hour, a Crowd, No Insurance

Kelly, Working at Union Station Plaza, Explains Rods Sway Distressingly and Hospital Bills Come High—Still He's at It.

"Flag Pole" Kelly, who has been a steeplejack for 14½ of his 24 years, began painting the three 150-foot flagpoles on Union Station Plaza yesterday.

The job will be only a mild one for Kelly, who has painted the poles atop the Empire State and Chrysler buildings. "Those poles sway like this," he said, indicating a bend as in a fly rod, "and the building sway plenty, too. These poles here don't bend much."

A crowd gathered as he ascended one of the poles to do some painting and earn his $8 an hour. "I never work for less," he said before going up, "but I don't earn so much at that.

"A steeplejack can't get any kind of insurance. And I buy the best kind of new rope after four jobs. And there are hospital bills. Out in 'Frisco in '34 one of the ropes broke and I dropped 20 feet and then slid more than 200 feet down a steel guy wire.

"I broke both arms and legs. I spent the rest of that year and part of the next in the hospital."

Kelly said he was under Government contract (the Plaza is controlled by the National Park Service) to give the poles three coats of white paint, and the ornate bases a dark red. He hopes to finish in a few days so he can move on to Ocean City next week.

This is his first job in Washington, although he has been in every State in the Union. "I keep moving all the time, although I only get work about half the time. I don't come from anywhere, my address is just 'general delivery.'

"When will I retire?" queried Kelly whose father and grandfather were steeplejacks before him. "When the law of gravity catches up with me."

Charles E. Hall, Census Bureau Veteran, Retires After 38 Years

Colored Director of Negro Statistics Section Gets Offers to Manage Night Club, Newspaper; Department Chiefs Praise Work.

After 38 years of service with the Census Bureau, Charles E. Hall retired yesterday as director of the bureau of Negro statistics and was immediately confronted with two offers.

"Should I manage a night club or should I return to newspaper work as a managing editor," Hall wanted to know.

As "happy days ahead for you" was chanted by more than 150 Census Bureau employes, the 70-year-old director said goodby to his friends in the department.

Former newspaper editor, real estate operator and railroad employe, Hall began his service with the Government as a clerk in the Census Bureau in 1900.

Born May 22, 1868, in Batavia, Kane County, Ill., Hall attended the public schools and was graduated from the Wilberforce University. He later received an honorary degree of master of arts from the Arkansas Baptist College.

Dr. Timothy F. Murphy, chief statistician, Division of Records and Publication, in presenting Hall with a radio, the gift of friends in the department, said "his volume on Negro statistics is certainly a most monumental piece of work and is very valuable."

William L. Austin, director of the census, praised Hall by saying "No one connected with the bureau has rendered any better service than he (Hall)."

Hall lives with his wife, Lena W. Hall, at 617 U street northwest.

In 1905 he completed the first report on a commercial subject compiled by a Negro and published by the Government. It was entitled "Clay Products of the United States." Later he arranged statistical tables for Bulletin 129, "Negroes in the United States, 1790-1915." During 1934-35 he compiled a report, "Negroes in the United States: 1920-1932."

Neighbors Assist In Arrival of First Greenbelt Native

Greenbelt's first native—Richard Lawrence Jones, born last Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Jones—was squalling lustily yesterday.

The infant weighed 7 pounds 6 ounces at birth. Heroes of the occasion were neighbors James H. Lamb, 26, and Mrs. Lamb, who were called by Jones, who had been unable to summon a physician because of lack of a telephone.

Lamb and his wife, parents of two young children, applied the knowledge they had obtained from a bulletin issued by the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, and by the time the family physician, Dr. Leonard Hays, of Hyattsville, arrived, Richard Lawrence was safely in the world.

Apoplectic Stroke Precipitated Presbyterian Churches' Union

Sudden Passing of Rev. C. B. Ramsdell Was Followed by Merger of North and Assembly Congregations Here 32 Years Ago.

A stroke of apoplexy 32 years ago precipitated the union of two churches into the Northminster Presbyterian Church, whose handsome new gothic building is under construction at Alaska avenue and Kalmia street northwest.

The Rev. Dr. Charles B. Ramsdell, who had served for 31 years as pastor of the North Presbyterian Church, rose during a Presbytery meeting in 1906 to voice opposition to the proposed merger of the Assembly and the New York Avenue churches. At the conclusion of his address, he toppled over dead of a stroke.

The tragedy left North Church without a pastor. The proposed merger never took place, but the same year North united with Assembly to form the Northminster Church, with the Rev. George P. Wilson, of Assembly, as first pastor.

Both the merging churches could point to long histories. Assembly was organized in 1852 by the Presbytery of the District of Columbia. Under the guidance of the Rev. Andrew G. Carothers as first pastor, the congregation met at Fifth and I streets northwest.

North Church, on N street between Ninth and Tenth, was founded in 1865 by the Presbytery of the Potomac, with the Rev. Louis R. Fox as pastor. The combined congregations moved together to a building at Eleventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Three years ago a second catastrophe visited Northminster. One Sunday in 1935 worshipers complained of an odor of parched wood which pervaded the building. The next day, as a precautionary measure, they had the furnace room lined with asbestos. But the following Sunday, as the first Sunday school pupil arrived for class, the building burst into flames and was destroyed.

Since then the congregation has been meeting in a small chapel on the Alaska avenue site, which had been purchased in 1926. The new building will house an auditorium and educational and recreational facilities. Alvin W. Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, is chairman of the building committee.

Northminster's present pastor—the Rev. Walter E. Price, who has served since 1933—was preceded by the Rev. Samuel A. Bower (1912-1919) and the Rev. Hugh Kerr Fulton (1920-1929).

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Local Men's Sole Idea of Diversion Is Drinking, Yet Most of Them Don't Know How, Girl Says.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a 23-year-old girl, born and reared in Washington, single and not a sour-puss. My problem is this: When the New Deal was inaugurated, there was also inaugurated in Washington a new era of courtship. With the influx of Government clerks (and by clerks I mean girls) the ratio of men to women became lopsided. Everyone knows this; especially the men. Consequently, the few men there are have taken the attitude of, "Okay, sister. If you won't, someone else will."

* * * *

I have been dating for seven or eight years and feel that I can say, sincerely and honestly, that the men in Washington today are just about the sorriest, most disgusting and most boring individuals a gal could have the tough luck of dating. These men don't know how to have good, clean fun. When we have dates with them we might as well prepare to go either to their apartments, drink highballs and be bored; or, go to a cocktail lounge, drink highballs and be bored.

* * * *

"All right," you may say. "If you don't like it, why not stay home?" That is exactly what I do. I stay home and enjoy it to a certain extent, but, Miss Haworth, I want to have dates, decent dates, and I want to be able to make a selection of the men with whom I go out. I want to have fun. I like boxing, basketball games, ping pong, swimming, riding, certain lectures, even skating, hiking and bicycling, but—the boys don't seem to warm up to any of these suggestions.

* * * *

Aren't there any men in Washington who know how to do something besides drink? (Most of them don't even know how to do that). And what's to be done about the scarcity of men here? I say—send the dag-gone Government girls back to their home towns where they belong. If we have to import Government clerks, let them be males—and males of a higher caliber than those we have at present. Sincerely,

NATIVE GIRL.

The Men Make Answer.

DEAR NATIVE GIRL: Disinclined as I am to believe that all (young) men "in Washington today are just about the sorriest, most disgusting and most boring individuals a gal" could have the misfortune to meet, I put a number of your accusatory questions to a random selection of the arraigned species—ranging in ages from 21 to 37 (most of them native Washingtonians)—for answer, retort, corroboration or explanation.

The findings of my research, given in each instance with the most earnest willingness to be helpful, were, to-wit:

* * * *

YOUNG MAN OF 37: "The girl's the victim of unfortunate association. There's not one man in 20 like that. The guy who professes to think it's smart to spend the evening drinking is actuated by the same psychology that has a 12-year-old kid trying to smoke, even when it makes him sick . . . What she ought to do is use her feminine wiles getting some fellow to like her enough to want to do the things she wants to do . . . When she finds one fellow—just one—with wholesome interests, she'll find a whole new world of decent associations opening up for her."

* * * *

YOUNG MAN OF 21: "Why, good gosh, the men of Washington were never more interested in outdoor sports than they are in this day and age. Lookit. For the first time in years, the Washington ball team is beginning to pay its way, and more and more fellows are taking to horseback riding, golf, swimming and so on. I'm on my way to a wrestling match right now. Do you suppose she'd want to go along? Got her telephone number?"

* * * *

YOUNG MAN OF 28: "Tell her to wear Brooks sweaters and one of those tweed skirts, so she'll look like the out-door type. I'll bet a dollar to a doughnut she wears fluffy draperies of the kind that immediately make a fellow think he's got to spend his last dime showing her the town. Tell her to get around to the sort of places she wants to go—or some of 'em, anyway—on her own power, without waiting for these highball-addicts to steer her. Maybe she'll meet some fellow there who likes her type and appreciates her interest in the things he's interested in . . ."

* * * *

YOUNG MAN OF 23: (After a protracted, preoccupied silence): "Doesn't she know she'll have to be pickey and choosey—with men as with everything else—all through life? She'll have to keep on shopping. Anyway, if she were a real native Washingtonian, she wouldn't give a hoot who was in the Government service. Their paths would never cross hers. Also, she shouldn't blame her present predicament entirely on the New Deal. She ought to know, as an old Washingtonian (if that's what she is), that the same sort of people who come here from 'back home' today were likewise coming here under Republican administrations. . . ."

* * * *

(Business of raised eyebrows on the part of this investigator). "—What I mean is," (continued the young man of 23) "the sort of people who chafed at respectable standards back home; weren't happy; and kept pestering their Senators and Representatives until they brought them here, where they don't fit in any better . . . Somebody ought to tell her that a girl is only affronted when she's looking for it!"

* * * *

"Oh, but I don't agree," I protested firmly, feeling it my duty to defend my own sex. "What about that alleged French saying, 'A woman ceases to be attractive when she ceases to be insulted'?" Triumphant agreement flooded the gentleman's face. "That's it exactly. You've said it," he proclaimed. M. H.

Mme. Nicole Finds Trade Slump Fails To Slow Fur Sales

Paris (U.P.).—Mme. Nicole, the famous Paris and New York modiste, talked about modes and revealed her opinion of American women.

'Withal that Wall Street is huff and sulky, American woman spend as much as ever," declared madame with a smile. "I have just done a rushing business in furs, especially in sable capes," she continued. "American law will not allow the Russian sable to be brought in for the next three years. You can imagine the run of that beautiful fur.

"I find that the American women have exquisite taste and they are the most elegant in the world."

As to fashions, she said:

"This is the year that the artists will shine. All the lovely pastel shades, ranging from the delicate blues to mauves and purples, will be the mode. Hats will mostly affect the 'canotier' shape and will be trimmed with exquisite flowers and tiny fruit."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 3.

SO TIGHTLY KNIT and complex is the life of this town, so devious are its entrances and exits, that it is almost impossible for a reporter here to dig up and thoroughly protect an exclusive story, or what we used to call a "scoop" when I was boning away at the Columbia School of Journalism—which, I believe, was just prior to the so-called Spanish-American "War."

As a result, ALICE HUGHES most of the "exclusive" tales printed here and then bandied around the country are really gossip, rumors, reports and just plain dreams. We get 'em anywhere—in bars, reading rooms, beauty salons and restaurants. For the chit-chat from overseas we go down to the docks and pick the brains of pals who are arriving from Europe with headsful of juicy morsels.

For instance, one of the local girl sleuths had a chum coming in on the Normandie a few weeks ago. She rushed to the pier and came up with two interesting "stories" from the Old World. They've never Leen printed as news on page 1, and so I assume they are only "reports," but they do make good reading and dress up a page. One was to the effect that David and Wallis Windsor would be permitted to pay a two-week, highly unofficial visit to England in the fall.

This, the piece said, was part of a plan to let the duke filter back home easily, so as not to allow him to steal any spotlight from the present King. The other yarn said that Prince Bernhard is still in dutch (no pun meant) with his royal ma-in-law, Wilhelmina of Holland, because he spent too much money on his vacation from princing, and also disobeyed mother by buying a new fast car after his smash-up. And it also said that Princess Juliana had fattened up again. That's the way to do it when "news" slacks off. It's legitimate, it's good newspapering and makes fresh reading, official or not. Can't stop the girls!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Did you read about our Mrs. Maria Kramer, who stepped right in and paid about $7,000,000 for the 30-story Hotel Lincoln, at Eighth avenue and Forty-fourth street? She's going to take general charge of the 1,400-room place, too, and since her husband owns the 25-story Dixie Hotel here, you can jolly well see what a place the Kramer home is going to be! Imagine discussing food, lodging and hospitality for about 2,500 guests over the dinner table at night! Good luck, Kramers, and take care of the spoons and napkins!

* * * *

The comedy called "Washington Jitters" lasted only two or three weeks here, proving it was not quite true to life. My aged spouse says he personally knows that the Capital has had jitters for 16 years—and maybe since its founding!

* * * *

Spring, merry spring! The sculptors and painters having had their outdoor shows, now the poets of Greenwich Village have tacked their masterpieces to a board fence down there. Sorty bards have lyrics and sagas nailed up, but report business is terrible, even for the 25-cent type. The star of the show is 92-year-old John Henry Titus, who offers copies of "The Face on the Barroom Floor."

* * * *

Pointless news of the day—Mrs. Frederick Payne, of here, is nicknamed "Tokio," and to live up to it wears a pagoda-shaped hat built of snake-skin. Hi there, Toky!

* * * *

I hear that the Angier Biddle Dukes, she having been Priscilla St. George, have papered their baby's bathroom with the congratulatory wires received when he came on the scene.

White hats, either straw or pique, have filled the clubhouse picture at the Belmont race track this spring, where the smart girls go to pose and be posed. Most of them were worn with dark veils, and many sported gay posies.

Watch Your Salt and Sugar If You Want a Slender Figure

Overweight Persons Generally Drink Too Much Water With Meals; Highly Seasoned Foods Encourage This Weakness.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SALT IS AN important item in the reducer's diet. Those of you who salt your food before even tasting it are apt to use it to excess and, although it may not have occurred to you, salt can prevent weight loss. There is a definite relation between the taking up of salt in the tissues and the retention of water, and water retention retards loss of weight.

Salt is a habit that grows on one, and many confirmed salters go so far as to salt bananas, apples, grapefruit and, in fact, practically everything they eat. All this is habit, and only by making yourself use less salt can you acquire a taste for less.

Water Stretches Stomach.

If you like salt, you probably also like sauces and condiments. All these things stimulate the flow of gastric juices and increase the appetite. It is not very likely that your appetite needs any encouragement.

Those who like their foods highly seasoned usually also like their meals well trimmed. Butter, gravy, mayonnaise and sauces can add hundreds of calories to the menu.

Sugar is another little item to be reckoned with by the reducer. We consume from five to ten times as much sugar per person per day in this country as is used by the average person abroad. Needless to say such extravagant use of sugar is no help to a reducing program.

The average overweight drinks too much water with meals and too little between meals. Water cannot make you fat, but it does increase the appetite. Taken at the beginning of the meal water stimulates the appetite, to much with the meal stretches the stomach, and taken at the end of the meal water remains in the stomach, thereby stretching it further and increasing the food capacity.

If you are serious about bringing your weight down to normal you will restrict the total liquids with the meals to eight ounces. This little dietary rule can make an amazing difference on the scales. Drink all the water you wish between meals. It does not influence your weight.

Stop Midnight Eating.

The midnight snack habit must be broken if you are to bring your weight to normal. Of course, you are hungry just before you go to bed—you are accustomed to eating at that time. Get the habit of going to bed without investigating the ice box and in two weeks you will not think about food at that time.

Salt, sugar, water and snacks may seem very insignificant, but they may play an important part in your reducing program.

1 cup of coffee cream
1 tablespoon of sifted confectioner's sugar.
Salt

Sift the flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in the shortening. Add the milk to make a soft dough. Pat or roll out to ¼ inch thickness. Spread berries over the dough, sprinkle with sugar. Roll the dough as for jelly roll. Leave a margin of 1 inch of plain dough all around. Press the overlapping edge and ends together to prevent loss of juice. Tie the roll in a cloth. Place on a pie pan and steam for one hour. Serve hot with cream sauce.

Make the sauce by combining sugar, nutmeg and salt. Add to the cream. Pour the cold cream over thick slices of the hot blackberry roll.

New Hair Dresses Emphasize Need of Beautiful Neck

The brushed-up coiffures and simple necklines so popular this summer make it imperative that every girl have a beautiful neck.

"It's her duty, says Perc Westmore, movie make-up director, "because there's no sight more unpleasant to a man than an unsightly feminine neck. Personally, I think Rosemary Lane has one of the most beautiful throatlines of any girl in pictures. When complimented on it, she laughingly attributes it to the fact that she has always been a crank on the subject of posture. But posture shouldn't be underestimated in the part it plays in throat beauty. Rosemary has also doubtless developed her throat muscles considerably through singing exercises.

"A few brief rules I would suggest for keeping the neck beautiful is to scrub it each morning with lots of rich suds and a hand brush, using a light rotary motion. Rinse well, dry well, and apply make-up foundation before powdering. At night use a rich cleansing cream. After wiping it off massage the neck with an oily cream, using an upward movement. Do a few neck exercises every evening, bending and rotating. Not only do they develop neck muscles, but help to promote sleep."

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

It's a Small World.

"How do you do, Mrs. —— I don't believe I caught the name? . . . Oh, Chitt . . . Chitt . . . That's a familiar name. Are you by any chance related to the Chitters of Baltimore? . . . Oh, of course, your name IS a little different. Well the Chitters are one of the oldest families in this section. They're among my very best friends. I'd love for you to meet them.

"Where ARE you from, Mrs. Chitt? . . . Detroit? . . . Oh, then, of course, you know the Burlaps . . . Yes, Burlap . . . the Percy Burlaps . . . You don't! . . . I thought everybody in Detroit knew the Percy Burlaps . . . They're very prominent people there. I always visit them . . . Oh! . . . You haven't lived in Detroit long? . . . Just where did you live before . . . Atlanta? . . . Oh, then you must know George's cousin down there—George, come here . . .

This is my husband, Mrs. Chitt . . . George, Mrs. Chitt is from Atlanta and she knows your cousin Lucy and—pardon me, Mrs. Chitt? . . . Oh, her name's Tootle—Lucy Tootle. The Tootles are a very old family. George's grandmother on his mother's side was a Tootle—they came originally from Virginia — now George, please don't run off . . . Wait!

"Oh, he's so silly about things like that . . . Well, anyway, between us—I was a Goofe, you know—we're simply related to practically everybody in Virginia and Maryland.

"Were you born in Atlanta, Mrs. Chitt? . . . What? . . . Birmingham? . . . What was your name before you were married . . . Small? . . . Small . . . Small . . . Now I know a family of Little's down in Birmingham—but of course that IS a little different. These Little's were very lovely people . . . they had a beautiful home here. If you're ever in Montgomery, you MUST look them up.

"I suppose your people had always lived in Atlanta, Mrs. Chitt? . . . What? . . . North Carolina? . . . You don't mean it! Say! George's father's mother's people came from North Carolina . . . Oh, George! . . . George! . . . If I could just catch his eye again! . . . Well, what was your mother's people's name? . . . Ross? . . . Ross . . . Ross . . . Say; George had a cousin named Ross Tootle! . . . Why, of course it must be the same family! Oh, George! Come here. . . .

"George, did you know Mrs. Chitt was a cousin of yours? . . . Yes! Her grandmother was a Ross! . . . Yes, and she came from North Carolina. It MUST be the same family. Now isn't that nice! . . . The Ross family is really very—— Oh, George, please don't run away . . . Wait! Oh, he's the silliest man I ever saw.

"When are you going back to Detroit, Mrs. Chitt? . . . Oh, you're not going back! . . . Chicago? . . . Oh, you're going to move there? . . . I've never been to Chicago, but I met a lovely woman from there—George! . . . Say, George, what was the name of that woman we met in Yellowstone Park? . . . Oh, the one from Chicago? . . . With the husband that had the asthma? . . . Oh, you never remember anything! . . . Now I know her name as well as I do yours, Mrs. Chitt . . . if I could just think of it.

"Well, anyway, they're very lovely people . . . he's the head man at some big plant there. They just begged me to come to visit them . . . and if you move to Chicago you MUST look them up.

"Will you be in Chicago soon, Mrs. Chitt? . . . Oh, you are? . . . To Europe? . . . How grand! I simply have scads of friends who are going abroad—say, did you ever know the McSapps in Cleveland? . . . Well, I thought maybe being it was so close to Detroit . . . and if you did run on to them abroad it would be so nice. Say, I tell you what I'll do! I'll give you a list of all my friends who are sailing—it would be so nice if you ran across some of them.

"I do wish I could think of the name of that woman from Chicago. It was something like—oh, it's escaped me again! They're really quite prominent, and I'd love for you to meet them—oh, say, I've got it! I remember! George! George! Come here quick! . . . Say, George, the name of that woman from Chicago I want Mrs. Chitt to meet is DOE.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Superstitions About Eyes.

Once a week in this column will be printed a discussion of a medical superstition. Readers are invited to contribute.

To cure a sty on the eye rub it with a wedding ring.

I had this practiced on me pretty regularly when I was young with my mother's wedding ring, and I can testify that it is purely superstition, and, as a matter of treatment, does no good.

As a matter of fact, it is probably harmful. The sty is merely an infection of one of the hair follicles in the eyelid, and it is a general principle of surgery that an infection should not be irritated or rubbed, because that will spread the pus through the tissues.

I am frequently asked for a remedy to prevent sties. I inherited one from an old doctor, which was to get a tincture of pulsatilla and dip a camel's-hair brush in it and lightly paint the edge of the eyelids. I told this to an eminent oculist on the Pacific coast, who told me that for years he had advocated using a 5 per cent solution of alcohol in water, using this on a camel's-hair brush in the same way. Since a tincture is simply a 10 per cent solution of a drug in alcohol, the oculist's remedy is probably simpler and, therefore, more correct, and we can asume that the pulsatilla can be left out. So the real prevention of sties is to paint the eyelids with a 5 per cent solution of alcohol, using a camel's-hair brush.

Another superstition about the eye is that if you get a cinder in one eye, you should rub the opposite eye.

I do not know whether you should call this a superstition. It is a kind of a trick and a very rational procedure. In the first place, rubbing one eye causes tears to form in both eyes, and the tears may wash the cinder out. More important still is it that if you rub the unaffected eye you do not rub the eye with the cinder in it and so you do not do yourself any harm.

Fields' Party In Center of Social Stage

Dance Near New York Honors Miss Bass, June Bride-Elect.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Out-of-town goings on have lots of Washington angles this week-end.

One of the biggest attention-getters north of the District line is the dance this evening at the Marshall Fields' country home near New York. The Japanese lanterns will be strung, two orchestras tuned and the punch bowl filled, all in honor of Miss Joanne Bass, who is to be married to Marshall Field, jr., on June 20. The bride-elect is a cousin of Miss Anne Child, the daughter of Mrs. Edmund W. Pavenstedt, of Washington, and the late Richard Washburn Child. Miss Child planned to attend the festivities, but at the last minute had to alter her schedule, so that she wasn't able to be off to the party.

Altogether, 1,000 friends have been invited to the affair. Identity of the other 998 is not so vital as the fact that Washington's own special bride-elect, Miss Margot Garrett, and her fiance, Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler, will be present. They have been guests of honor themselves for such a long time that it will no doubt seem like a rea lnovelty to attend a fete just as guests . . . even so, they'll still be pretty important.

The scene of the wedding of Miss Bass and Mr. Field will be the garden of the former's grandmother, Mrs. Charles S. Bird, who resides in East Walpole, Mass.

David Hare's Brother, Author

It will be recalled that not so many days ago David Meredith Hare and his bride, the former Miss Susanna Wilson, daughter of the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances E. Perkins, came to town for a brisk 24 hours. Mr. Hare brought his color camera along and spent their Washington visit dashing in and out of white marble buildings in pursuit of portrait studies of high-up Government officials. Now comes the news that his half-brother, John Goodwin, is the author of a book just off the press.

It is a biography entitled "Freddy Fribbs (Flea)," and tells about the adventures of Freddy and his large family, all of whom seem to have hopped around a good deal. Mr. Goodwin, who has left the photographic field exclusively to his talented brother, once designed hats for a noted fashion oracle, and has also lent his deft touch to stories about Mexico, written when he lived in Acapulco. He has visited frequently in Washington, where he has a wide circle of friends.

Newport Debut Has Washington Silent

Newport, which sprang into prominence in the lively days after de Civil Wah, will be just as lively this summer, and is all prepared for its traditional seven-week season. Bailey's Beach is getting a wave-set and the Newport Casino is already open.

Washington society will particularly have its eye on the debut party of Miss Fernando de Mohrenschildt, daughter of Mrs. Francis Taylor, who is the daughter of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo. The event bids fair to stir up just as much bustle as the presentation of Miss Marsyl Stokes last summer.

The latest news is that Miss de Mohrenschildt will make her bow some time during the third week in August . . . unless schedules between here and then undergo drastic revision.

The Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, gave a luncheon yesterday in honor of Dr. Carlos E. Finlay, who is a guest at the Embassy. Dr. Finlay is the son of Dr. Carlos J. Finlay, Cuban discoverer of the yellow fever germ.

Others present were Dr. William Thornwald Davis, Dr. Thomas Cajigas, Dr. Felip Martinez, William A. Wielind, Manuel Giron-Cerna, and members of the Embassy staff.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHATEVER Miss Elinor Ryan wears at the dance she is giving tonight at her residence on Foxhall road, it won't be a certain two piece number of pink and carbon blue which she recently purchased from Marcel Rochas. Miss Ryan has reason to wish she had never heard of this particular Parisian couturier, for on his account she has had to spend several hours this week in the United States District Court in New York.

DUDLEY HARMON

The graddaughter of Thomas Fortune Ryan testified there on Thursday at the trial of Marcel Rochas, Inc., and Guy Guerin de Font-Joyeuse, manager of the firm's New York shop, on an indictment which charged that large quantities of gowns were smuggled into New York in the bags and on the backs of Parisian models.

Miss Ryan identified the pink and blue frock as having been purchased from the firm, and was obliged to watch it tagged with exhibit numbers and stowed away with other evidence in the case. Mrs. Harry A. Bull, blonde young wife of the editor of Town and Country, was also among the witnesses, identifying a woolen suit and two evening gowns she had purchased. Mrs. Bull is expected to visit Washington shortly.

IMPRESSIONS of yesterday, from five to seven:

Every square inch of Ralph Snowden Hill's small Georgetown garden was packed and jammed with people as he entertained in honor of Mrs. Robert Scotten. The much-feted guest of honor, as everyone should know by now, is the wife of the counselor of our embassy in Brazil, and she couldn't have been more entertained during her visit here if her husband were an ambassador.

Mr. Hill is one of our best known and most hospitable bachelors, and his parties are always informal and fun. One of the nicest features is "Mammy," the old colored woman in genteel black gown, white cap and kerchief who is always on hand to open the door. She has been with Mr. Hill's family for years and years and years.

LADY LEWIS, Benjamin Plunket and Edward Gardner staged a sit-down party in the little room opening onto the terrace. The others, who stood up, included such familiar party faces as:

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., wearing a black velvet wrap as a concession to the dank air, and joined later by Mr. Robert; Mrs. John Caswell, recovered from the mumps; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, in black and white; Mrs. J. Fred Essary, in black and red, and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt, in plain black.

Also Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, with a stuning ruby and diamond clip at the neck of her black dress; Mrs. Mondell Gregg, sporting a dazzling white hat atop her navy blue wool ensemble; Mrs. McCook Knox, another navy blue devotee; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell, Mrs. S. Kent Legare, dripping with silver foxes; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, sitting at a table in the garden, and half a hundred others.

* * * *

IT TAKES more than a cool and cloudy day to keep Washingtonians out of gardens in the spring, and while friends of Mrs. Scotten were meeting at Mr. Hill's, a number of younger people gathered at the Netherlands Legation where Miss Nora van Haersma de With was hostess. Everybody sat on the terrace, where a ping pong table had been set up and a radio blared forth music.

Our hostess, in a navy blue tailored frock, with a small white collar, welcomed among others: Samuel Biddle, the first to arrive; Miss Frances Andrews, looking more like Loretta Young than ever in an off-white wool coat and a broadbrimmed straw hat with touches of blue; Miss Emily Davis, Michael Straight of the State Department; Nancy Mann, Harold Walker, Rafal Lepkowski, of the Polish Embassy; Miss Ethel Worthington, in a tailored navy blue coat over a matching frock, and a smart black pancake hat which tied under the chin; Tinley Garnett, Miss Mary Louise Marsh and a dozen others.

Miss de With will sail July 2 to spend the rest of the summer at her family's estate near Utrecht, Holland.

Century Club Ends Season With Picnic

One-Act Farce Presented Before Members Fall to Box Luncheons.

Women Scurry to Sylvan Spots to Eat in Palisades Park.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Twentieth Century Club yesterday closed its season with its annual June picnic, held at Palisades Park.

The members, with their luncheons in baskets and boxes, assembled at the field house at 11 o'clock where a program was presented before the hour of the picnic. Mrs. John G. Ladd was in charge of the presentation of a one-act farce, "Lady Fingers," given by a cast of club members. The players were Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, Mrs. Stephen Olop, Mrs. Stanley Young and Mrs. Ladd. Mrs. Edward Clark, a past president, introduced the characters.

Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington, also a past president, described her trip around the world from which she returned only a few weeks ago. She dwelt principally on her visits to Egypt and Bali. Mrs. Farrington wore a red and white striped silk sports dress with a three-quarter length jacket, and a broad-brimmed red hat.

Bright Sports Clothes Are Worn

All of the club members were in sports clothes, many wearing bright prints and several, including Mrs. Lawrence Martin, the first vice president, wearing white. Mrs. Edward Montgomery, the president, wore a black and white print with a white hat

When the program was over there was a general scurrying for lunch baskets and to select places to eat. The park afforded a variety of inviting spots conveniently arranged for picnickers. Some of the women, uncertain as to the weather, chose the front porch of the field house where they had the roof to shelter them in case of rain. A table from which the ice cream and coffee were served was placed on the open terrace at the back of the house, overlooking the expanse of grass and woodland sloping toward the river.

There were rustic tables and benches under the trees where groups gathered to enjoy their luncheons and sit and chat afterward. Later in the afternoon several tables of cards were formed.

Mrs. Stimson Heads Picnic Committee

The committee for the outing included Mrs. Richard Danforth Stimson, Mrs. Dion S. Birney, chairman of hospitality, and Mrs. Edward B. Clark, chairman of program. They were assisted by members of the ushers and the social committee: Mrs. Basil Manly, chairman of the social committee; Mrs. Harry W. Price, Mrs. Allison Miller, Mrs. Stanley Young, Mrs. William Ridgely Chapline, Mrs. Flavelle Koss, Mrs. Ryland G. Bryant and Mrs. Elmer Frazier.

The board members of the club will be entertained June 9 at the home of Mrs. Harold Doyle in Arundel, Md.

The Twentieth Century, one of the oldest women's organizations in the Capital, will celebrate its golden anniversary in two years and is already considering plans for an appropriate observance. It will resume its meetings in October.

Picnic Closes Year's Activities for Club

Mrs. Edward Montgomery, left, president of the Twentieth Century Club, is shown in the upper picture at the club's picnic yesterday in Palisades Park, with Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington and Mrs. Lawrence Martin. In the lower picture are Mrs. Richard Danforth Stimson, left, and Mrs. Stanley Young, members of the committee, serving the ice cream.

Church Group Turns Offices To Doll House

1,000 Toys Await 'Adoption' of Toys Contributed at Series of Teas.

Headquarters of the Washington Federation of Churches, 1749 N street, has been transformed into a little girl's dream of toyland. The library and drawing room on the second floor are occupied by 1,000 dolls—all waiting for "adoption."

The smiling company of toys will remain on exhibition today and tomorrow before being taken by Miss Etta Mai Russell for distribution via the Toy Truck. They represent the response of Washington women to the plan for providing playthings and bringing happiness to the children of the city's slums during vacation time. All have been contributed within the past three days at the series of doll teas sponsored by the Women's Council of the Federation of Churches, of which Mrs. Frank A. Linzel is president.

Visitors who call to see the host of dolls between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock this afternoon and tomorrow will not be expected to bring contributions and tea will not be served. Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, chairman of the juvenile court department of the council, by which the teas have been given, and Miss Russell will be on hand however to welcome callers and show them the dolls. Both grown-ups and children may see the exhibition.

Although the headquarters of the federation are by no means of small proportions, they can properly be termed a dolls' house for the time being. Dolls occupy the mantel, tables, bookcases, arm chairs, straight chairs, stand or sit on top of the piano and sleep contentedly on the floor. Not all of them sleep. Some didn't close their eyes at all last night—just sat up and looked at their companions.

An addition to the permanent exhibit group was sent in yesterday from the Institute for the Blind. A blind girl, who had heard of the project, knitted a gay little red suit for a doll and gave it as her contribution.

Mrs. Linzel and Mrs. Howerton received yesterday with Mrs. G. E. Sauer, who acted as hostess of the day, and on Thursday, with Mrs. Fannie Foster. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, poured yesterday, as did Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who came across the street as a neighbor from her federation headquarters to express interest in the undertaking. Others who assisted at the tea table yesterday were Miss Mary Dewson, Miss Marjorie Webster, Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin and Miss Sibyl Baker.

Those who assisted on Thursday were Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, wife of Maj. Brown, of the Metropolitan Police, who not only poured tea, but also sang a group of songs; Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, Mrs. Marvin McIntyre and Mrs. Edward Montgomery.

Marion Butler Is Dead at 75; Created R.F.D.

Former Carolina Senator Was Farm Leader, Noted Lawyer.

Marion Butler, former Senator from North Carolina, creator of the rural mail delivery system, died yesterday at Washington Sanitarium of a kidney ailment. He was 75.

Well known in legal circles here, Mr. Butler served a Senate term from 1895 to 1901 as a Populist, the political party then in power in North Carolina.

Born in Sampson County, N. C., Mr. Butler was the son of the late Wiley and Romelia Ferrell Butler. His great-grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and his father served with the Confederate Army in the War Between the States.

Reared on his father's farm Mr. Butler was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1885. Three years later he purchased the Clinton (N. C.) Caucasian, making it the organ of the Farmers' Alliance, of which he was elected county president.

In State Senate.

He was elected to the State Senate as an Allied Democrat in 1890 and under his management the movement rapidly advanced, acquiring the balance of power in North Carolina.

Appointed chairman of the joint committee on railroad commission, Mr. Butler succeeded in passing the present railroad commission law of North Carolina. He also helped establish the State university for girls. He was president of the State Farmers' Alliance in 1891 and 1892, and in 1894 was chosen president of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union.

Immediately after the adjournment of the Chicago convention of 1892, he publicly declared himself against Gov. Cleveland, and after withdrawing from the Democratic Party, he organized the People's Party.

Established R. F. D.

Probably the greatest single feat attributed to Senator Butler is his establishment of the rural mail delivery system. He fought single-handed and alone for this expansion of the postal system and at first succeeded in getting only an appropriation of $50,000 for an experiment. The experiment proved successful and has now extended to every portion of the country.

Following his retiring from the Senate he engaged in the practice of law, establishing offices in Raleigh, N. C. and Washington. In 1893 he married Florence Faison.

Mr. Butler made his home here with his wife at 1867 Wyoming avenue northwest. His law offices were in the American Building.

Surviving besides his wife are three sons, Marion Butler, jr., Miami Beach, Fla., Edward Butler, Winston-Salem, N. C. and Wiley Butler, New York City; and two daughters, Mrs. Thomas B. Woodson, San Antonio, Tex., and Mrs. Huntington Cairns, of this city.

The funeral party will leave here at 6 p. m. today for Clinton, N. C. The body will lie in state there until tomorrow at 4:30 p. m., when the rites will be held.

Hygiene? U.S. Has 'All the Answers' In 10-Cent Booklet

"Personal Hygiene," a 10-cent seller which may become one of the most popular of Federal publications, appeared yesterday.

Compiled by Dr. Robert Olesen, Assistant Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, the 48-page booklet is hoped to be the answer to the prayer of P. H. S. employes who daily face a deluge of such inquiries as:

What are vitamins?

Can athletics be overdone?

How should the bedroom be ventilated?

How often should I have my hair marceled?

Heretofore each such request for information has necessitated a separate reply. Now the correspondents simply will be sent a copy of "Personal Hygiene" until the free supply is all gone, then they will be informed that a dime sent to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., will bring all the answers.

The booklet is probably the first of its kind to be published by a Federal agency. Among its chapter titles are Good Sanitary Manners, Immunization Against Infectious Diseases of Childhood, School Hygiene, Dental Health, The Food We Should Eat, Sport for Health's Sake, First Aid and Hygiene of Old Age.

Garnet Jex, Washington artist, illustrated the booklet.

9 Court Plan Foes Honored by Group

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and eight members of the Senate Judiciary Committee this week received life membership certificates from "The Wheel of Progress," a national organization designed to promote the principles of democracy.

In making the presentation Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, national president, stated:

"We appreciate the true Americanism displayed by the Senators in their fight to preserve the United States Supreme Court."

Those receiving the certificates were Senators Warren R. Austin, William E. Borah, Frederick Van Nuys, William H. King, Edward R. Burke, Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Tom Connally and Pat McCarren.

The organization, which makes its national headquarters here at the Washington Hotel, was organized in Washington in 1924. A non-partisan group, the chief objectives are advancement, achievement, patriotism and progress. The organization boasts of more than 500 members.

Harvard Develops Sifter for Atoms

Cambridge, Mass., June 3 (AP).—Harvard physicists announced last night development of a delicate atom "sifter," unlocking the door to ancient geological secrets of the earth.

Dr. Alfred O. Nier, national research fellow in the Harvard physics laboratories, reported the discovery, which, he said, gave the element, lead, an important, new role as a "timepiece" for revealing the date of formation of many mineral deposits, and possibly as a "historian" of early earth.

Party to Press In White House Her Biggest Job

Beer, Ice Cream for 1,500 Is 2-Week Assignment for Housekeeper.

Making ready for any White House party is hard, but preparing for the press party was worst of all, Mrs. Henry Nesbit, Executive Mansion housekeeper, yesterday told the annual congress of the National Executive Housekeepers Association at the Raleigh Hotel.

"We started making arrangements two weeks in advance," she explained, "and then checked up on the quantities and orders of food several days before it was scheduled."

Much of the difficulty lay in the fact that there were nearly 1,500 guests and that chicken salad and ice cream, as well as punch and beer, were served.

Souvenir hunters are among her heaviest burdens, Mrs. Nesbit said. "They've even taken the hands off a clock," she confided.

Like a Great Big Home.

"The White House, aside from its formal official affairs," Mrs. Nesbit told the assembled housekeepers, "is conducted like any large private home. The duties for the day really start the afternoon of the day before, with the making of the menu and the ordering of foods needed for the next day."

The first thing in the morning, the head cook and the butler come to see the housekeeper to hand in their lists of supplies needed. Then Mrs. Nesbit confers with Mrs. Roosevelt on plans for the day, the number of meals to be served and the rooms to be assigned any house guests.

Her most trying experience at the White House occurred on the evening of the arrival of Lord Tweedsmuir, the Governor General of Canada.

"I had ordered ice cream in forms for the informal dinner," she said, "but the dessert failed to arrive before the time set for the evening meal.

"I phoned the place where the order had been put, but they were closed. Then dinner was moved back to give me time to arrange for the dessert. Finally, I managed to get hold of ice cream in bricks and it arrived just in time to be served. When it was all over I was weak."

Some White House guests are on diets, Mrs. Nesbit continued, and arrangements are always made to supply the necessary foods. "Lord Tweedsmuir sent us a list of foods he could eat," she added.

Draperies Are Topic.

During the day the 200 superhousekeepers exchanged ideas on such varied topics as the best types of draperies and the psychological effects of beauty.

Most of the members of the association, founded in 1930 by Miss Margaret Barnes, housekeeper at the Raleigh, work in hotels or hospitals.

The principal speaker today will be Lucius Boomer, president of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Corporation, of New York, who will discuss "Executive Housekeepers and Employe Problems" at 11:30 a. m. A meeting tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. of the new board of directors—to be elected during the congress—will end the session.

Ford Still Expects Era of Prosperity

Detroit, June 3 (AP).—In his first statement of public affairs since he returned home from a recent Eastern trip that took him to Washington as a White House visitor, Henry Ford said in an interview today that nothing has happened in recent weeks to change his conviction that "we are going to have the greatest era of prosperity and happiness we have ever known."

Nazi Edict Orders Confiscation of All 'Degenerate' Art

Berlin, June 3 (AP).—A further step to eradicate from Germany what Nazis regard as "degenerate" art was announced today in a decree published in the official Reich Gesetzblatt.

The decree provides that privately owned pictures offending the Nazi sense of art and exhibited in public museums or galleries may be confiscated without compensation.

Today's decree, which at present does not apply to Austrian Germany, said confiscations would be carried out "under expert advice and guidance." It expressly stated foreign owned objects would be exempt.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Amid all the anti-Roosevelt stories, it's sorta refreshing to a country boy to encounter a good pro-Roosevelt story, like this one being told by Senator Duffy, of Wisconsin: There were six men who didn't like Roosevelt. One was a tory judge, and the second was a lawyer who didn't know anything, either.

Ruth Roosevelt . . . pearls

* * * *

Third was a general whose chest was covered with medals, and the fourth one hadn't ever been to war, either.

Fifth was a broker and the sixth one occupied the next cell to him.

* * * *

Since Harry Hopkins, the cheerful giver, endorsed precocious young Wearin for the Senate in Iowa, Congressmen on the Hill are telling about the first encounter between Hopkins and Wearin, who didn't make a good first impression on Harry, to put it mildly.

"Whew!" said Harry, as Wearin left, so the story goes. "You can have my interest in that guy!" But times change, eh?

"—Senator wins the bird vote"

Apropos of the re-election campaign of Cotton Ed Smith, of South Carolina, who looks more like a genial pirate than any Senator except North Dakota's Frazier, the mushiest tale of the session is being told.

He was going fishing, so he went out to pluck a gardenia for his lady, from the cape jessamine tree in his front yard, and to dig some worms under the catalpa.

* * * *

But a pair of cardinals were going tweet-tweet on the gardenia bush, so Senator Smith was too tenderhearted to disturb them; and a pair of mockingbirds were going tweet-tweet on the catalpa, so he couldn't dig any worms . . . He walked back into the house, presumably going "tweet-tweet" and hoping that South Carolinians would be equally tenderhearted.

Since the Nazi spies around New York got all botched up, Ambassador Dieckhoff's lot in Washington has been unhappier than ever.

He has learned that American sentiment is so anti-Hitler that this country would be savagely hostile to Germany in the event of another war, and he has undoubtedly transmitted this information to Berlin.

At first Americans were polite, if cold, to him; now he is apt to run into razzing and embarrassing questions even at polite parties. (At an evening party recently the questions about Czechoslovakia were so difficult that he turned lobster red.)

* * * *

Perhaps it isn't his fault that in official circles his embassy is regarded as a beehive of espionage and propaganda activities . . . Even the Nazi Bund, which is reputed to have cost Hitler $2,000,000, is a flop, and German-Americans think a "plebiscite" of Americans of German ancestry would show 90 per cent of them against Hitler.

"—redistribution of wealth"

The First Lady has now passed on the last strand of pearls from the pearl collar her mother-in-law gave her to Anne Clark, young John Roosevelt's fiancee, who gets one string, as did the other Presidential daughters-in-law . . . Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt got the middle one.

This is another (and a very sensible) example of redistribution of wealth during the Roosevelt Administration; if you have five children, your wealth certainly gets distributed.

* * * *

These days the light in the Lincoln Memorial, which illuminates the statue of Honest Abe, is turned off around midnight, leaving the Capital's greatest shrine in darkness . . . Many a tourist would deem it a justifiable extravagance if it were left on all night, and the few cents it would cost saved elsewhere.

* * * *

A luscious Washington lady who gets around in the more rarefied revels of New York society recounts that a friend of hers met George Whitney, the Morgan partner, walking down the street the other day with a long, unwieldly package under his arm.

"What's 'that?" she asked. "It looks like a baseball bat."

"Yes," said George Whitney, and changed the conversation.

But his questioner reverted to the package again.

"Why are you carrying a baseball bat?" she insisted.

"Well," said Whitney, "I have a brother in Sing Sing, and I'm sending him a ball bat for the baseball team."

Karl Jarrell Feted By the Board of Trade

Fears for the freedom of the American press, and a plea for the community's support in strengthening and improving newspapers were voiced last night by Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, in an address at graduation exercises of the Sidwell Friends School.

Introduced by Albert E. Rogers, headmaster, Morley told the 19 graduates and audience of 300 "I think we have got to fight in this country for a free and independent press . . . We must set our face very seriously against the trend toward censorship of the press."

No longer are newspapers taken for granted, "like coffee on the breakfast table," he told his audience. The public must assist in the development of the press, he continued, and called for educated sections of the community to interest themselves in newspapers, in what should be considered "news."

Asserting that the last 27 years have produced a new world, he said high-school graduates of today are better able to face problems than graduates of 1911. He called for interest in the problems of the press on the part of both high-school graduates and adults.

"The newspaper is the mirror of the community," he concluded, saying that it must appeal to both the "ditch digger and doctor of divinity." He added that newspapers must develop a "public utility psychology," but are able to develop their own regulations

Diplomas were presented by Headmaster Rogers and George H. Sensner. The list of graduates follows:

Robert B. Bravo	Edward E. Martin

First and I Site 'Reserved' for Health Center

Ruhland Approves Plan; Action by D. C. Heads Is Awaited.

The site of Cardozo School, First and I streets southwest, has been "reserved" for the proposed new health center, it was learned yesterday.

A special committee, headed by Assistant Engineer Commissioner H. S. Bishop, jr., has been studying available sites in the District for a new Jefferson Junior High School and library, and a health center.

Although the report of the findings of the committee have not been submitted to the District Commissioners, it was disclosed that the committee had selected the Cardozo site as the only one owned by the District government available for the center.

D. C. Must Own Land.

Under the terms of the bill authorizing the construction of the health center, it was specifically stated the site must be owned by the District. The center would be constructed at a cost of approximately $200,000. It would include a tuberculosis clinic, maternity clinics and would provide for child welfare and dental service.

Center One of Three.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday added his approval to the proposed site, but pointed out that the Commissioners had not given official approval.

"I believe the location of the school is central, having an accentuated health problem, and I hope there will be no deliy in the actual beginning of construction," he said.

Ruhland pointed out that the plans for the center, which were previously made for the Jones School site, First and L streets northwest, could be used for the Cardozo site.

The new health center would be one of three planned for the District.

New Trial Ordered For Officer Held On Weight Charge

Judge John P. McMahon set a new trial June 13 for Policeman Theodore Crow, of the Eleventh Precinct, charged with violating the weights and measures law, after a Police Court jury disagreed.

Crow, who was proprietor of the Simplex Coal Co., 1225 Good Hope road southeast, faced two charges of short weight coal sales, two of making improper delivery tickets and two of operating a delivery truck without his firm name displayed.

Cop Who Shot Suspect Saves Child by Blood

Motorcycle Policeman Thomas W. Shomette, who shot and seriously wounded a colored man Wednesday, yesterday saved the life of an 18-month-old baby by giving a pint and a half of his blood to the victim of hemophelia.

Bobby Merritt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Merritt, 1236 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, was facing death at Sibley Hospital. The transfusion so helped the child that he was released from the hospital last night.

Court's Decision Gets Lady's Teeth From Postoffice

A little lady in Laramie, Wyoming, will have her set of false teeth in time to make her speech at the banquet.

It seems that the Postoffice Department issued a fraud order against a Chicago, Ill., mail order house, Sylvian B. Heinenger Co. The lady's teeth along with other mail matter, were impounded.

Yesterday Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat came to her rescue when he asked the Postoffice to return the teeth, since they were no part of the case itself. Justice Peyton Gordon announced he had decided to lift the entire order.

Justice Gordon wrote:

"While Heinenger's business may be and doubtless is obnoxious to his brethren in the dental profession, yet there is nothing inherently fraudulent in selling dentures by mail."

Civil Service Draft for D.C. Is Approved

Commissioners Send Proposed Bill to Budget Bureau.

Introduction in Congress at This Session Is Hoped For.

After months of consideration, the District Commissioners yesterday approved a proposed bill establishing an independent civil service system for the District government. The draft was sent to the Budget Bureau.

Officials in the District Building hoped it would be approved by the Budget Bureau and introduced in Congress before adjournment. Although it is not expected that the bill would receive action this session, the Commissioners pointed out that it would be brought to the attention of leaders and experts who are analyzing methods for reorganizing the local departments.

Preference Provided.

Residents of the Metropolitan area of the District—which is defined in the proposed bill as the territory adjacent to the District within a radius of 12 miles from the United States Capitol—would receive preference for all future jobs in the municipal government.

School teachers, policemen and firemen, who at the present time operate under their own merit system would be included in the system as would all District personnel. Covering the selection, promotion, transfer, demotion, dismissal and suspension of employes, the law does not provide exemption of any department head except those appointed for definite terms of office, such as the three District Commissioners.

The bill also proposes the repeal of the provision for the appointment of the District Surveyor for a definite term of four years. This office would come directly under the merit system.

Examinations Planned.

It is the belief of the Commissioners that creation of the independent civil service system would promote efficiency.

The following cardinal principles are included in the bill:

Open competitive examinations for testing the fitness of applicants for original entrance in the District government.

Vacancies to be filled by promotion, in case of vacancy where exceptional qualifications are required, the Commissioners may suspend the provisions requiring competition.

A period of probation of 6 months before any absolute appointment.

The same preference given veterans or their dependents by existing law in the United States Civil Service shall be allowed and given veterans or their dependents.

No removals except for cause.

The law also provides for the creation of the Department of Personnel, under direction of a Director of Personnel, appointed by the Commissioners for a term of 15 years.

Warrings' Cruiser Burns While 'Rags' Denies Tax Evasion

While Charles (Rags) Warring defended himself in District Court yesterday against income tax fraud charges, the motor cruiser Play Time, registered in the name of his sister, Mrs. Esther Cady, and once used by the Warring brothers, burned and sank in the Potomac below Fort Washington.

Capt. P. C. Smith, of Crisfield, Md., who was taking the boat to Colonial Beach, Va., escaped. He was alone on the $4,000 boat.

In District court, Rags Warring, brought here from Leavenworth Penitentiary, where he is serving a term in connection with a shooting attack on Joseph E. O'Brien, pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiring with four others in income tax evasions. Warring was the last of the five to be arraigned, the others already having pleaded not guilty.

They are Emmett and Leo Warring, his brothers, and Gordon L. Sadur and Henry L. Sherr, tax consultants.

Milk Drivers Gain Raises, Drop Strike

800 D. C. Workers Vote Two to One to Accept Terms.

Employers Grant 2-Week Vacation and Overtime Wages.

The threatened strike of 1,100 District milk drivers was averted last night when union members voted 2 to 1 to accept terms offered by 11 distributing companies in the Washington area.

New concessions embodied in the one-year contract to be signed Monday include weekly wage increases from $1 to $2 for men working in the plants; double time for all overtime run up by drivers on their days off, with time-and-a-half for all other overtime, and strict adherence to seniority in vacation schedules.

The union yielded on its demand for a $3 weekly pay boost for drivers, focal point of dispute with the distributing firms in the past two weeks of almost daily negotiation. Drivers voted May 1 by an overwhelming majority to walk out Monday unless the wage increase were granted.

Prior to the strike threat employers had already agreed to include in the 1938-39 contract two weeks vacation with pay, instead of one; reduction of maximum hours for drivers from 60 to 58; a 48-hour week for plant workers, with time-and-a-half for overtime; payment of 3 per cent interest on bonds required of drivers and installation of time clocks.

Last night's meeting in the Rialto Theater was attended by approximately 800 members of Milk Wagon Drivers Local No. 246.

1,000 Go to Bingo for Underprivileged

A thousand persons attended a benefit bingo party at the Willard Hotel last night, given by the Variety Club to raise money for its summer camp for underprivileged children. Officials estimated about $1,000 was realized.

Other announcers included the professional football players, Charlie Malone, Cliff Battles, Tuffy Lehmans and Riley Smith. 2 District Boys, 18, in Limbo Of Law Because of Age Issue

Two 18-year-old boys yesterday found themselves in a legal no-man's land between the jurisdictions of the District Court and the Juvenile Court.

Judge Jesse C. Adkins abruptly ordered cessation of the trial of four boys, charged with attempted criminal assault, because two of them were only 17 when the crime was committed October 17, 1937.

Under the 1938 Juvenile Court law, signed by President Roosevelt Wednesday night, the Juvenile Court has jurisdiction over boys charged with breaking a law when they are under 18 if they are brought to trial before they are 21. Juvenile Court jurisdiction formerly extended only to the 17-year mark.

Recessing court until Wednesday, Judge Adkins remanded the two younger defendants to Juvenile Court. Legal circles were uncertain, however, whether the Juvenile Court would accept the case since the District Court had original jurisdiction. Arrested October 18, the boys have been held in District Court jurisdiction more than seven months.

Approximately 20 similar cases would be moved from District Court to the Juvenile docket if the Juvenile Court accepts jurisdiction in the present action.

Fun Is Keynote Of New Crosby Film at Palace

Beatrice Lillie and Devine Score Laughs While Bing Does the Singing.

"DOCTOR RHYTHM." Paramount picturization of a screen play by Jo Swerling and Richard Connell, based on O. Henry's story of "The Badge of Policeman O'Roon," starring Bing Crosby, with Mary Carlisle, Beatrice Lillie, Andy Devine, Raye Davis, Laura Hope Crews, Fred Keating, Sterling Holloway, Franklin Pangborn, Louis Armstrong and his orchestra, William Austin, Gino Corrado and scores more. Musical numbers by James V. Monaco and John Burke. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Palace Theater.

When funnier pictures are made Bing Crosby will be in them. Not that Bing is ultra-comical—his humor being on the smooth side, slick, but restrained—but he has the knack, or the luck, to be usually surrounded by hilarity-provoking champions.

In "Dr. Rhythm" we have Beatrice Lillie (Lady Peel) and Andy Devine providing the most hysterical moments of the movie year. Lady Peel's saga about the "dozen double damask dinner napkins" left onlookers helpless. It sounds sort of silly, but it is one of those things that starts in high and goes right up into the stratosphere. Andy Devine's combat with a seal (in the seal's own tank) was another honey.

Beatrice Lillie definitely arrives in pictures with this one. All memories of Bea's former celluloid bust should be buried—and deep. That vitriolic Lillie clowning, inimitable and refreshing, is the dominant note of the picture. While Lady Peel can't swing out with the elegant deviltry she shows in her stage appearances (how the Hays office would blush at anything like that) she is still plenty of all right. It's hard to make a lily out of the Lillie.

A Lillie of a Swing.

As the first person to take a definite and hard fall out of the current swing craze, Bea deserves a special pat on the back. Her "Rhythm" smacks swing all around the place, and in its most vulnerable spots.

Bing Crosby is not very fortunate in his songs in "Dr. Rhythm." They are not especially zestful and some, as "On the Sentimental Side," are entirely too familiar. But this does not cramp that perfect Crosby style. Bing can undoubtedly do more with less material than any other screen singer. He takes that trifling "Learning How to Sing," and with the aid of an amazing little bird and a park statue, darned near turns it into a comic opera.

The story of "Dr. Rhythm" is a fantasy unspoiled by a grain of sense. Bing, a young doctor, takes the place of his pal, Policeman Andy Devine, bodyguard to a debbie (Mary Carlisle) who is in love with a schlemiel gambler (Magician Fred Keating). From there the story just goes looping around with appreciated intervals for Crosby and Lillie songs and scallywagging.

Mary Carlisle is glamorous, a la Hollywood, sings a trifle and has adopted a sort of Joan Bennett style. Fred Keating as an actor is a—you finish it. Laura Hope Crew, as ever, is the finished trouper as a chubby lady who's lost her appetite. Sterling Holloway, seen too little, contributes wistful comedy as the beered-up driver of an ice cream wagon.

Short Subjects Score.

One of the best of the "Crime Doesn't Pay" shorts depicts the troubles of bank robbers in making a getaway. The bank robbers aren't such bad guys, but the film will fill you with loathing for the human worms who fatten on crime, taking the dough but easing out of the risks.

A travel film of Czechoslovakia offers some of the most beautiful color shots ever brought to the screen. It drew applause.

Topside is the newsreel, with shots of Mrs. Roosevelt doing a square dance in the West Virginia hills, sweeps winners who oughta be in the movies and a lady escapee from the ill-fated S. S. Mandalay, who is nearly as comical as Bea Lillie. Also a view of a war game near Chicago that looks like a real preview of Armageddon.

RKO-Keith's

It was a good idea to hold this particular picture over into June, for it is an excellent wedding-month feature. All newly married young couples and all about-to-be-married couples should hurry right down to Fifteenth street to watch the trials and tribulations of the harassed young Peter Morgans, who are married and yet aren't.

The young couples will laugh and snicker and guffaw (or should), but they will also probably hold hands and count their blessings, or take warning, as the case may be, because the young Morgans really have an awfully hard time of it. You see Peter is a college professor and Francey is a night club entertainer, the vivacious lady of the title, and they meet, fall in love and marry all in one 24 hours, and then they have to go right home to Peter's family and break the news. It takes lots longer to do that than it did to get married, and it also takes a great many laughs, several problems, delirious situations and quite a bit of real heartbreak and swell playing by a swell cast.

There are a few dull and silly moments, but these are more than made up for by the boathouse scene, the classroom episodes and that priceless folding-bed routine. There is an intriguing glint-in-the-eye spirit about certain scenes!

Ginger Rogers does much more than all right by both her part and her partner. She and Jimmy Stewart play beautifully together, sincerely and touchingly as well as scoring as highly effective comedians. Beulah Bondi, Charles Coburn and James Ellison took bows last night for their work in important roles, but we want to hand our bouquets to four pretty minor characters: Culpepper, Jimmy's assistant, played by Grady Sutton; the very human and much amused visiting professor, name unknown; the early morning salesman, played by Vinton Haworth, once of Central High School, and the easily influenced and oversympathetic Pullman porter of Willie Best. The last-named in wonderful.

The March of Time is also here.

Warner Baxter Stars in Stevenson Tale; Tune Tilt on Stage.

"KIDNAPPED." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the story by Robert Louis Stevenson, adapted to the screen by Sonya Levien, Eleanor Harris, Ernest Pascal and Edwin Blum, costarring Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew and Arleen Whelan, with C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen, John Carradine, Nigel Bruce, Miles Mander, Ralph Forbes, H. B. Warner, Arthur Hohl, S. E. Clive, Halliwell Hobbes, Montagu Love, Maroni Olsen, Leonard Mudie, Mary Gordon, Forrester Harvey, Clyde Cook, Holmes Herbert and Brandon Hurst. Directed by Alfred Werker. Previewed Tuesday, May 31. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Although the high-tension melodrama of the original Robert Louis Stevenson story is a bit diluted by the introduction of a gentle romance between Alan Breck, the idolized leader of the Scottish clansmen in their rebellion against the tyranny of King George II of England, and little Jeannie MacDonald, a simple child of the moors, whose lover is forced to flee the country, it still is not a dull or a placid film play that is presented in "Kidnapped." Excitement, suspense and thrills continue to form the basic structure of the drama and the unexpected love affair is only an intermittent interruption of the more spirited developments.

BELL.

There are many fine qualities in the screen play now on view at Loew's Capitol Theater to commend it to judicious amusement seekers. It is splendidly cast and acted, beautifully photographed and given atmospheric values that seldom have been surpassed.

Story of Ancient Scotland.

The story dates back to 1747, when the Scots were on the verge of revolution against the exorbitant taxes and other injustices heaped upon them by the British crown. Their hero was Alan Breck, an intrepid young man with the courage of a lion and the luck of a four-leaf clover. A price is put upon his head for the crime that was committed by little Jeannie's betrothed. Then there happens into his life small Master David Balfour, Edinburgh-bound to inherit a fortune upon the death of his father in America. David has overheard and seen too much to be left at large, so he is made an unwilling member of Breck's band of patriots. On their unhappy mission to the MacDonald cottage to break the news that Jeannie's lover, Jamie, has killed a King's tax collector and been forced into voluntary exile, Jeannie also becomes a member of the party in the hope that she may be able to intercept Jamie at Glasgow and sail with him to America.

From this point the action takes the form of all manner of cruel and crafty deeds, with David shanghaied for a price at the behest of a plotting uncle, Alan faced by the gallows and Jeannie not knowing what to do or where to go next.

The thing is compounded with cumulative effect and is only marred by a bit of anticlimax at the end. The film play's denouement is a little too much on the syruppy side.

Triple-Star Alliance.

Warner Baxter, in the role of Breck, brings one of his crisp, interesting and authoritative portrayals to the screen. He is an Alan Breck whom the people of the countryside well might have followed. He has a splendid, if maturing, foil in Freddie Bartholomew, the rabid young royalist, who gradually perceives the purposes and the worthiness of the man he first had despised as a rebel and a traitor. Master Bartholomew has taken on years and also dramatic vigor since his last appearance on the silver sheet in "Captains Courageous." His transition from the frightened youngster, visiting his uncle's castle for the first time, into a thoroughly aroused and self-reliant young man when he realizes that an attempt has been made on his life, marks this talented young Britisher as an even better juvenile actor than many have heretofore suspected.

As for Arleen Whelan, elevated in less than a year from a manicurist's table to stardom before the cameras, there seems to this writer little to criticize in her performance of the role of Jeannie. To be sure, Miss Whelan is not a great emotional actress, but neither would Jeannie MacDonald, the simple young girl of the moors, have been. The character is more ingenuous than it is tragic—and so is Miss Whelan. When she speaks, if you were to close your eyes, you would think it was Janet Gaynor. When she sings "Loch Lomond" the effect is entirely pleasing.

"Opera vs. Jazz."

In the small-type paragraph preceding these ruminations will be found the names of a long list of distinguished players who support the stars. All do well in their assignments, with especial emphasis on the characterizations contributed by C. Aubrey Smith, as the Duke of Argyle; Reginald Owen, as Capt. Hoseason, and Miles Mander as the scheming Ebenezer Balfour. The picture has been handsomely produced and executed in mellow sepia tints that add to the beauty of many scenes of uncommon magnitude.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week assumes the guise of an "Opera vs. Jazz" contest between Phil Lampkin's "Concert Masters" and Barney Rapp's "Swing New Englanders." The race at yesterday afternoon's first performance seemed to end in a dead heat. Emma Calvert, Anne Evans, Robert Freund and Wilfred Smith are Mr. Lampkin's operatic soloists, and Bill Smith, singer; the Three Harvards, comic Indian club jugglers; Sunny Rice, tap dancer; Eleanor Tennis, ballet dancer, and Ruby Wright, singer, compose the Rapp group of specialists.

Ruby Wright and Sunny Rice both have a way with them. The audience, however, was impartial in its applause, converting every act into a hit.

Perhaps the greatest of these was Bob Hall, that incorrigible impromptu rhymer, who is as apt as not to toss your name across the footlights at you, as he did this column's yesterday in one of his cleverly improvised lyrics.

The Fox Movietone News, as usual, augments a feature that betrays obvious care in its preparation and production.

KATHARINE HEPBURN,

who scores one of her decisive screen successes as Linda Seton in Columbia's new picturization of Philip Barry's stage play of "Holiday," now on view at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Cary Grant again is co-starred with Miss Hepburn and a strong cast contributes flawless support in a well-made and highly entertaining comedy-drama.

Barry Play Is Converted Into Sterling Film; Ace Stage Bill.

"HOLIDAY." Columbia Pictures filmization of the play by Philip Barry, adapted to the screen by Donald Ogden Stewart and Sidney Buchman, costarring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant, with Doris Nolan, Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton, Henry Kolker, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon and Henry Daniell. Directed by George Cukor. Previewed Wednesday, June 1. At the Earle Theater.

Having already committed ourself to the opinion that Columbia's new picturization of Philip Barry's stage play of "Holiday" is a livelier and more engrossing entertainment than the earlier film version of the same work released in 1930, with Ann Harding in the role now played by Katharine Hepburn, we can do no less, on second sober thought, than reiterate that view.

"Holiday," as presented on the screen at the Earle Theater this week, is a superlative piece of celluloid, reflecting the work of a superlative brace of adapters and the uniformly excellent performances of a superlatively well-chosen cast. It sparkles when it needs to sparkle and is intelligently serious when the requirements of character and situation demand that. It is opulently mounted and skillfully and artistically photographed. The sum total of all that should be, and is, a splendid picture.

At base, the story of "Holiday" reflects the conflict between the worship of great wealth and the investigative spirit that actuates certain successful young business men who wish to find out what life is all about before it is too late. The play derives its title from this ambition on the part of Johnny Case to "retire" at 30 and resume his financial career after he has got his bearings and decided precisely what life may eventually hold for him.

A Social Error.

Johnny, in the meantime, commits the social error of falling in love with the younger daughter of a household of plutocrats to whom money is god—with one exception. Linda Seton is the only member of the family, with the possible other exception of her bibulous young brother, who is able to appreciate Johnny's point of view and sympathize with it wholly, because it also is her own. The proposed marriage doesn't come off, but another and a better one does.

The present version of the play, contrived for the screen by Donald Ogden Stewart and Sidney Buchman, is an exhilarating and witty one that bristles with humor and brisk action and also completely encompasses the author's intention in those argumentative moments when levity gives way to a serious contemplation of youth's philosophy of life and its indifference to the rich man's conventional view of gold.

Evidently having costarred with entire compatability in "Bringing Up Baby," Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant again play opposite each other in the roles of Linda Seton and Johnny Case. Mr. Grant here further strengthens the impression that he is one of the cinema's most competent young actors. He interprets Johnny as a completely natural and unaffected young man who knows what he wants and only temporarily will permit himself to be deflected from his pursuit of it. It is a fine piece of character drawing, devoid of any annoying traces of "theatricalism."

Hepburn Happily Cast.

Miss Hepburn is no less happily cast in her own role. She, too, plays naturally and as if born to the riches by which she is surrounded, yet holding them in high disdain. Displaying an equally proficient command of both comedy and the more serious trends of the play, she scores one of her major screen successes in a role that is nicely tailored to her measure. Her gymnastics with Cary Grant are bits of fun of which she would be the last to be suspected.

The supporting cast is quite up to the exalted standard of the co-stars. Doris Nolan is an imperious and a vindictive Junia Seton who looks, as well as acts, the part to the life. And then there is Lew Ayres, as the dipsomaniac of the family. Ayres turns in a performance that is head and shoulders above anything he has recently done. Edward Everett Horton, playing more nearly "straight" than usual, and Jean Dixon are exceptionally deft comedy foils for those in whom the interest of the comedy-drama centers, and Henry Kolker is a properly pompous son of millions who cannot understand anybody's preferring anything to a growing bank account.

George Cukor's direction is without flaw and serves, along with the adaptation of the Messrs. Stewart and Buchman, to make of "Holiday" a strictly modern and highly diverting contribution to the list of the season's best pictures.

"Music With a Smile."

Happy Felton and His Orchestra, coheadlining the stage bill with the Three Stooges at the Earle this week, is entitled to his sobriquet. I think I never have seen a happier young man and his good humor is communicated to the members of his band. In addition to conducting his instrumentalists, the rotund Mr. Felton acts as master of ceremonies and serves now and again as singer, both with highly successful results.

The orchestra, I should say, is just so-so, but it does deliver "music with a smile" and went over with a bang yesterday afternoon. So did the specialists, including petite Mildred Fenton, "blonde beauty of song," with a voice bigger than she is herself; Armand Cangros, tenor; the Gaylene Sisters, acrobatic and control dancers of unique ability, and Eddie Laughton and the Three Stooges, Howard, Fine and Howard—otherwise, Moe, Larry and Curley. These boys are rowdy and rough, but the audience went for them in a big way at yesterday's second performance.

Paramount News and Jo Lombardi's overture supplement a feature that would top any bill.

Collects Programs.

Walter Connolly, who appears in "Four's a Crowd," owns a unique collection of old theater programs. He specializes in playbills of old melodramas and his collection includes hundreds of the period 1850-1900, when American playgoers were being treated to the most lurid of melodramas.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Dear Lord, Kind Lord!
Gracious Lord! I pray
Thou will look on all I love
Tenderly today!
Weed their hearts of weariness;
Scatter every care—
Down a wake of angel wings
Winnowing the air—
Deal Lord! Kind Lord!
Gracious Lord! I pray—
Thou wilt look on all I love
Tenderly today.

Hollywood, Calif., June 3.—John McCormack had us crying while he sang those beautiful words at the wedding of Basil Rathbone's son, Rodion. It was one of the loveliest weddings we've seen. The setting might have been an old English garden, hedged in with greens, gardenias and Easter lilies. The altar set up on the edge of the swimming pool.

HEDDA HOPPER

Screened off was an orchestra for dancing, but everyone so busy greeting old friends, nobody danced. Old-time stars mingled with new ones to their mutual delight. Basil invited all the people he's ever played with and their families.

Rodion Rathbone telephoned later from Del Monte, where he and Caroline went for a quiet honeymoon, to say that when they entered the dinning room there, they were greeted by the Charles Boyers, Jimmy Townsends, Miriam Hopkins and Annabella. Rodion so nervous and surprised, his new wedding ring rolled off his finger, skidded to the end of the dining room, with the stars down on their hands and knees looking for it.

Ran into May Robson on "Sister Act" set at Warner Brothers. She was still a little weak from her attack of ptomaine poisoning. Commenting on the report of Lionel Barrymore's near collapse, with not a word of it true, May said, "I'm certain if the people who give out those reports knew the harm they cause, they'd never do it again. My son and his wife were frantic when they heard of my illness over the radio. Couldn't get me on the long distance telephone because I was at the studio working. They finally got a wire through, and we reached them at the airport with the truth, just as they were boarding a plane. The shock made them so ill they went to bed for two days.

Gail Page, who's made a great hit in her first picture, "Crime School," told me of Lola Lane's kindness in pointing out camera angles and tricks a newcomer wouldn't know. Geoffrey Lynn, the boy who got his chance because Errol Flynn wasn't there, besides being a fine actor, has great charm.

I congratulated Dick Foran, who a year ago was a singing cowboy, on getting a dressy part in "Sister Act." "That's what you think," he said. "To me, it's a stepdown when they take me away from horses."

Wendy Barry, all black and blue, started work in the Eddie Robinson picture, "Outside the Law." Wendy had head-on collision at the roller skating rink the night before.

Eddie could make a fortune heading a crime college of his own. From playing the worst type gangster, he becomes a professor of law in this one, and I'll lay money on the line that he'll uphold the law as a Supreme Court judge before many moons roll round. There's picture material in this if the right person went to work on it.

If lucky enough to get in, you would have been thrilled last week at Yucca Loma, that delightful ranch near Victorville. Guests included Maude Adams, W. A. R. Collins, who wrote "Northwest Passage"; Chauncey McKeever, the Freddie Zinnemans and Grant Mitchell.

Metropolitan

You will see Robin Hood and his Merry Men, of course. So all we'll do is say look at a few things you wouldn't have overlooked, anyhow.

There is a freshness and zest to Robin's arrow-zinging, a special touch of paprika to Sir Guy's villainy and an extra fillip to the double-dealing of Prince John. It is all as you visualized it in your story books. It will not disappoint you.

For the artists who remember other Technicolor films in which scarlet capes were flaunted, let it be recorded here that even Disney's fantasies have not equaled the skill and beauty of the color effects blended into such memorable scenes as meet the eye constantly—wherever Robin rides.

Errol Flynn is a fine Robin Hood, if you don't remember Doug Fairbanks, which we don't, so we'll take Errol. Olivia de Haviland is a complaisantly lovely Lady Marian; Mr. Rains is Prince John, Mr. Rathbone, Sir Guy. Our pets are Friar Tuck (Eugene Pallette) and Little John (Alan Hale).

The music? We think it was all right. As a matter of fact, we didn't notice it. After all, Robin Hood was always meeting those adversities and listening for music at such times seems sort of pallid to us. Perhaps we have reverted to Grade 5-B again.

S. S.

Ranch Open.

After three months, Cecil B. De Mille has been able to get through by motor to his Little Tujunga canyon ranch to relax and work on the script of "Union Pacific." All approaches to the ranch were washed out by the February floods.

Broadway Chums.

Clark Gable and Earle Larrimore, Theater Guild star, roomed together when both were trying to get a break on Broadway.

Columbia

"Test Pilot," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of a story by Lieut. Comdr. Frank Wead, yesterday began the second week of its repeat engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater, making its fifth on F street.

This is the story of the intrepid young men who take new model planes into the air to prove their speed, carrying power and stability before they are commissioned in the services for which they have been designed. The action is packed with thrills in the air and humor and pathos on the ground.

The stellar roles are played in their best manner by Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy. Important supporting roles are portrayed by Lionel Barrymore and Samuel S. Hinds.

The production is one that is suitable to the subject and the aerial photography achieves many startlingly spectacular effects.

The companion attraction for the new week is the latest installment of "The Lone Ranger," the hair-raising serial play of adventure and dirty work in the West.

Son Takes Acting Cues From Father

Jack Mulhall, once a star, is portraying the role of a floor walker in "You and Me," the George Raft-Sylvia Sidney picture.

Last week, intently watching him from the sidelines, was a well-built, good-looking chap who bore close resemblance to the actor when Mulhall was in his prime.

The youth was Jack Mulhall, jr., who is employed at the studio in a clerical capacity and who, last week, took a screen test that may result in his leaving his desk for a dressing room and a make-up box.

New York, June 3.

JIMMY HINES: Dixie Davis, your co-defendant, is talking to District Attorney Dewey. Davis feels that he's been abandoned—that, although his bail was reduced to $75,000, nobody has come forth to aid him or to provide the money he needed for a lawyer. Zimbalist: Your son, Efrem Zimbalist, jr., got himself a job without help from anyone. He's been working at the N. B. C. Studios here—as a page boy . . . Jack Dempsey: An ex-world champ almost was stabbed at Broadway and Fiftieth as the result of a betting snarl.

• • • •

GROVER WHALEN: Burgess Meredith has invited Orson Welles, recent producer of "Julius Caesar," to join him in a new enterprise—a Shakespeare theater for the N. Y. World's Fair. They're arranging the deal now . . . William Green: John Ringling North, head of the Ringling Circus, has applied to the American Federation of Actors for a reduction in wage scale—but has received no answer yet . . . Mayor Frank Hague: When you take the witness stand you'll be asked which members of the Cabinet you'll allow to speak in Jersey City.

• • • •

LAMAR HARDY: John Cahill is the one now being mentioned most prominently as your successor to the job of U. S. Attorney here . . . Equity: George Abbott has called off all plans to produce the dramatization of Sinclair Lewis' "Prodigal Parents," because Lewis thought it was all too dull . . . Will Hays: Two more Rudolph Valentino silent movies will be revived throughout the country. They will be offered as talkies. Arthur Boran, the mimic, is being hired to have his voice dubbed in for Valentino's.

BRIEN McMAHON: J. P. McEvoy, the writer, is heading for Kentucky to witness your conspiracy trials . . . Sidney Kingsley: Your "Dead End" kids, now in Hollywood, where they're required to continue their schooling at the studio's schoolhouse, are being penalized by the officials—for making passes at their teacher.

GREGOR DUNCAN: The editors of Ken Magazine—who offer inside news regarding world affairs—saw some of your cartoons in For Men Only and wanted to reach you. They called your publisher, who refused to divulge your address . . . Phone calls were made to four other magazines without avail . . . The all-seeing editors of this inside-news magazine finally discovered your address in a most unusual way. They looked—in the telephone directory.

• • • •

DAVID SARNOFF: The report in radio circles is that R. C. A. is constructing a huge television studio on the ninth floor of Radio City to be ready before August—and to which the audience will be charged admission prices . . . Gov. Harry Moore: If you're still wondering why Mayor Ellenstein of Newark has been absent from the City Hall—he went up to Bill Brown's health camp because he's ill . . . Jack Benny: The new Crosley ratings will show that for the first time in years you're in third place—behind Bergen and the Radio Theater.

• • • •

DISTRICT ATTORNEY SAM FOLEY: Isn't it true that Lillian Hlavati, who will be tried next Thursday on a charge of having killed her father, will plead guilty to manslaughter in the second degree? . . . Kenneth Sutherland: S. G. Harnett, one of the leaders of the Knights of Pythias, will oppose you for the Democratic leadership of Coney Island.

• • • •

DARRYL ZANUCK: Now that the Dionne quintuplets can talk, it's going to be tougher filming their next picture. They'll talk for the screen all right—but in French. They'll have to be taught some English.

ADOLF HITLER: When your training ship, the Horst-Wessel, docked at the Virgin Islands your sailors went to the American Bar there. Because of the absence of girls, two of the Nazis danced with each other . . . Marc Blitzenstein, author of "The Cradle Will Rock," was present and asked the sailors: "So you like that song you're dancing to? Do you know what it is?" . . . The sailors shook their heads . . . "That song," they were told, "is 'Bei Mir Bist du Schoen'."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Willis Sharpe Kilmer, breeder-owner of Sun Beau, takes a thinly-veiled slap at the Man o' War blood strain in reminding turf writers that his prize stallion still boasts the greatest money-winning record of any thoroughbred.

POVICH.

With literature fresh off the mimeograph machines, Kilmer's publicity department which shouts the wares of his Court Manor Stud Farm at New Market, Va., has the following to say:

"If Granville's earnings of over $111,000 were added to Seabiscuit's present total, Seabiscuit would still be $14,000 short of Sun Beau's mark of $376,744; War Admiral, with Granville's earnings added to his, would still have to earn $34,000 to equal the mark of the great Sun Beau."

Seabiscuit is brought into the discussion only, apparently, to disguise the slap at War Admiral. Kilmer has no special concern with the Seabiscuit line. It is no threat to his own interests as an outstanding breeder. But he has long been feuding with Sam Riddle, owner of the Man o' War line which produced War Admiral. They are the Montagues and Capulets of horse breeding—the Kilmers and the Riddles.

* * * *

The Kilmer publicity hand-out after pointing out the clear-cut margin of Sun Beau in the total of turf winnings, goes on to flick further doubt on the comparative greatness of War Admiral, again bringing in Seabiscuit to soften the slap. It says:

In 1937, War Admiral won twice at 1¼ miles—in 2:03 1-5 and 2:04 4-5. Seabiscuit ran the distance once, finishing second, the winner's time being 2:02 4-5. During his career Sun Beau won 10 races at 1¼ miles, his five best times being 2:01 3-5, 2:01 4-5, 2:02 4-5, 2:02 4-5 and 2:03 1-5."

Mr. Kilmer points out further that Sun Beau could carry weight; that in 1931 he raced 14 times and his average weight was 126.4. He won the 1¼-mile Maryland Handicap by five lengths from such as Victorian, Sortie, Petee-Wrack, Misstep, Solace and Pigeon Hole, passing the leaders with a rush in the stretch to win "in a canter."

* * * *

There isn't much doubt as to Sun Beau's caliber. He is known as a good, honest, durable horse. And one of the best travelers in all turf history. They transported him from track to track on short notice and stake after stake fell to his prowess. But despite his phenomenal winnings, he never was rated as a brilliant horse., He lost too many races to inferior opposition.

But it is surprising that Mr. Kilmer's publicity men should harp on the item of comparative times to prove Sun Beau's case against the Man o' War line. Horsemen know that comparative times in horse racing are ludicrously fallible. Why, on the day several years ago that Omaha won the Belmont Stakes, a selling plater race over the same mile-and-a-half distance was run in even faster time.

They know that the truly brilliant horses run not against time but against their opposition. That was why Seabiscuit, for all his superior times, was scheduled to be the long-shot against War Admiral in the ill-fated match race. War Admiral with no times to match Seabiscuit's brilliant record with the clockers would have been a 3-to-5 shot nevertheless.

There was another illustration of the fallacy of time as a medium of comparison no longer ago than last month's Kentucky Derby. In that race Lawrin was the winner in the poorest field to go to the post in years. He didn't beat much and he has not been accorded high honors for his victory. Yet he ran the mile and a quarter in faster time than did the great Omaha.

* * * *

Kilmer hopes, of course, to select greater credit on the Sunbriar strain whence Sun Beau sprang. And in Sun Beau he can build up an impressive case. The horse was sound throughout his seven-year racing career and despite the fact that he was in the hands of nine different trainers. But the mere fact that he leads all in money winning hardly stamps him as an outstanding stallion.

There were other great horses who failed in the stud—notably the brilliant Blue Larkspur, the immortal Salvator and the great mares Princess Doreen and Top Flight. They were brilliant horses but their progeny achieved no distinction.

There might have been other horses who long ago would have topped Sun Beau's record of winnings. But they were ahead of their time. Sun Beau came along in the fruitful years of 1926-33 when purses were at their peak. Purse winnings constitute a bad yardstick for measuring greatness. When Man o' War won the Belmont Stakes in 1920, they were worth only $7,950. The same stakes netted Gallant Fox $66,040 in 1930.

Suppose Man o' War had raced in those lush times, and suppose that, like Sun Beau, he had had a seven-year racing career, not a two-year career. Our guess is that the Kilmer stud would have no money-winning record to guard as jealously as it does now.

Ruffing Wins 7th as Yanks Beat Tigers

Heavy Hitters Help Red to 5-to-1 Victory to Take Series.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Red Ruffing carved himself another pitching masterpiece today, posting his seventh win of the year in hurling the Yankees to a 5-to-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Rfus the Red had some timely hitting help from Joe DiMaggio, who snapped out of his slump with a single and his seventh homer of the year; Tommy Henrich, who drove in two runs, and Bill Dickey, who batted in another.

But from start to finish Big Red was the hero. He allowed just seven hits. He walked only one and he fanned five. Except for the fourth, when the Tigers scored their lone tally, not a man passed first base off the big right-hander, who hasn't been beaten since the opening day of the season. The victory was the third straight for the Yankees over the Tigers in the four-game series.

For three innings, Ruffing and George Gill hooked up in a tight duel. In the fourth, the Tigers staked Gill to a one-run lead, singles by Billy Rogell and Dixie Walker and Charley Gehringer's fly to right.

But in their half of the same frame, the Yanks bombarded Gill for four runs to put the game on ice.

Crosetti started it off with a double, and Red Rolfe and DiMaggio followed with successive singles for the first two runs. Dickey then dumped a double in deep right and Henrich singled in the same general direction and the other two came in. After George Coffman had taken Gill's place in the eighth, DiMaggio wound up the scoring with his homer, his first in nearly three weeks.

Indians Overtake Macks, Win 10-5

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 3.—For the second straight day the Cleveland Indians went on a batting spree in the late innings to score an uphill 10-to-5 victory over the Athletics today.

Coming to bat in the eighth inning trailing by 5-3, the Indians slammed out six consecutive hits to win the game with a six-run rally. Bud Thomas was chased to the showers after Hale and Heath singled. Earl Averill and Hal Trosky then tripled off Nelson Potter to make him the losing pitcher. Williams came in and gave up five hits in two innings, including a homer by Ken Keltner in the ninth.

Chiefly by virtue of home runs by rookie Sam Chapman and Frankie Hayes, the A's were ahead when Thomas wilted in the eighth.

It was the seventh victory of the season for Johnny Allen, who pitched the entire game for Cleveland.

Marion Brown, Mrs. Hussey Set New Club Course Marks

Former Shoots 75 at Indian Spring While Latter Fires 36 on Back Nine at Army and Navy for 80.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Two women's course records were broken yesterday in competitive rounds at Indian Spring and Army and Navy. Marion Brown, playing in the ladies opening day event at Four Corners Course, shot a 75, while over at the Service Club Course Mrs. G. F. Hussey played the back nine in 36 after an outgoing 44 for an 80, to win the Peabody Cup.

Miss Brown, playing with Mrs. Myron Davy, Mrs. Walter Stokes and Mrs. L. G. Pray, shot the new mark from the middle tees, and not the women's markers that make the course play shorter. Out in 37 after a 5-to-5 start, The Post Cup champion returned in 38, including a 10-foot putt on the final green.

Mrs. Pray won the guest prize in the tourney with 83-7—76, with Mrs. P. J. Winkler, Congressional, second with 114-34—80, and Mrs. N. J. Waldron, Beaver Dam, was next with 96-14—82. Mrs. J. T. Powell, of Manor, had the least putts with 30.

Miss Brown's score easily copped the prize among the club members

Trojan Track Team Leads In I. C. 4-A

Southern Calif. Places All but One Man in the Finals.

(Summaries on Page 18.)

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Picking up where they left off in triumph three years ago, Southern California's mighty Trojans put on a preview of their track and field prowess today to emphasize the prospect they will romp off easily with the Eastern Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. team title tomorrow, for the eighth time.

The Pacific Coast Conference champions, packing the first far Western invasion of the Eastern old guard's bailiwick since 1935, dominated the qualifying trials conducted in 11 of the 15 championship events at Randalls Island Stadium and marked by unexpectedly high-grade performances.

Southern California collected 13 places in eight events. Only one of Dean Cromwell's pupils failed to qualify and that was by a narrow margin.

Reed Trusel, Trojan javelin tosser, was just outside the qualifying grade in seventh place. Otherwise the display of all-around strength by U. S. C., notably in the sprints and hurdles, was such as to forecast a lop-sided team triumph tomorrow when the Trojans will call up the rest of their favorites, including potential victors in the high jump and pole vault.

Cornell, team winner in 1936, showed sufficient strength in the track events to qualify nine men, giving the Ithacans second place honors in today's trials, but it was doubtful whether the Ithacans carried any more threat than California, Pittsburgh and Yale, each of which placed eight athletes in the trials.

Michigan State, with five qualifiers, led the challenge of the Midwest, which also will be represented in the finals by Marquette.

Long John Woodruff, dusky footracing star of Pittsburgh's title defending team, flashed enough of his speed in the trials to warrant the prediction he will repeat last year's conquests in the 440 and 880-yard races. The lanky Negro won his quarter-mile test in 47.9 seconds, then came back an hour later to breeze the half in 1.55.8. He hung up the fastest qualifying times for each event.

Michigan State's Wilbur Greer emerged as one of the leading challengers for Johnson, the sprint king, by dashing 100 yards in 9.7 seconds.

Nation's Top Skeet Shooters Meet in Big Event Here Today

More Than 200 Entered in Shoot; National Capital Rebels Defend Their Five-Man Team Crown.

By John D. Paulus

More than 200 of the Nation's top-ranking skeet shooters will open the fifth annual North-South Shoot at the National Capital Skeet Club today. The event, now recognized as one of the big gatherings of United States skeet stars, will be concluded tomorrow.

The National Capital Rebels, composed of George Deyoe, captain; Dick Stuart, Fred Ramsdell, Harry Walters and Vic Frank, will be seeking top honors in the fastest field in the country. The Rebels, an ace aggregation of Washington shooters, made their mark in last year's event and indicate the interest shown by local sportsmen in this skeet shooting business.

Frank R. Kelley, of New Jersey, for the third successive year captain of the All-America team, will defend his individual all-bore title against the array of local stars mentioned above.

Kelly, rated the world's best skeet shot, won his first major title at the North-South shoot in 1934 when he took the individual with a score of 98x100. He won again last year

Cincinnati, June 3.—The Brooklyn Dodgers spotted the Reds four runs in the first inning today and then came from way behind to beat them, 5 to 4, for their second straight victory of the series.

A two-run rally in the ninth, with Cookie Lavagetto and Dolph Camilli driving the tying and winning runs across, drove Paul Derringer to the showers and put the game on ice for Brooklyn.

Pirates Trim Giants, 6 to 5

Pittsburgh, June 3 (AP).—The New York Giants added a pitching collapse to their hitting slump today and lost a 6-to-5 decision to the Pirates.

The defeat, fourth in a row for the National League champions, shaved the New Yorkers' league lead to a slim game-and-a-half over the Chicago Cubs. The victory boosted the Pirates to fourth place in the league standings.

Rookie Bob Klinger, up from Sacramento, stopped Bill Terry's troupe with 8 hits in going the route for the first time this season and posting his second victory. He was handicapped by 4 errors his mates made afield, but pulled out of the tight spots effectively.

The Bucs staked him to a big lead when they bombarded Harry Gumbert to the showers with a 6-run barrage in the second inning, and thereafter Klinger just about coasted in.

Paul Waner, collecting three hits in four chances, was the batting hero for Pittsburgh. The three singles boosted him into the "2,500-hit club" for his career. He is the only player active in the National League today who has 2,500 or more hits to his credit.

Harry Danning, collecting three of the Giants' eight hits provided the major trouble for Klinger throughout the game.

Gumbert lasted just long enough to be charged with the defeat. Gus Suhr opened the Pirates' big second by drawing a walk. Al Todd doubled him to third and Pep Young was walked, loading the bases. Klinger also drew a pass, forcing in a run. Lee Handley singled two more across. Lloyd and Paul Waner also singled for another pair of runs. Bill Lohrman replaced Gumbert and Gus Suhr's single scored the sixth run.

Dettweiler to Captain Hoya Yinks Team in '39

Billy Dettweiler, a Washington boy and for the past two years the most consistent clubwielder on Georgetown University's golf team, yesterday was elected captain of the Hoya linksmen for 1939. Dettweiler is a junior in the college of arts and sciences, and has long been prominent on District links.

British Walker Cup Team Leads Yankees, 2-1

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, June 3.—Great Britain's Walker Cup golfers solved the secret of the lightning-fast greens of old St. Andrews with greater consistency today than their United States rivals.

As a result, the end of the opening day's Scotch foursomes matches found Britain leading the trophy defenders, 2 to 1, and looking forward with fresh confidence to its first victory in the international series.

Of the four American combinations, only British Amateur Champion Charley Yates, of Atlanta, and Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., came through. And even they had to hang on for dear life to beat Charles Stowe and Alex Kyle, 3 and 2, after being 7 up with 9 to go and then dormie 6.

The all-Scottish combination of Hector Thomson and Gordon Peters, used to the tricky greens and the alternate-stroke Scotch foursome technique, turned back United States Amateur Champion Johnny Goodman and Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Olympia, Wash., 4 and 2, and the all-England duo of Leonard Crawley and Frank Pennink triumphed at 2 and 1 over Slim Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans and Stocky Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, who were completely baffled by the mirror-slick, freshly-mowed greens.

In the other match, the United States No. 1 paid of Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati, and Charles (Chuck) Kocsis, of Detroit, finished all square at the end of 36 holes with Jim Bruen, 18-year-old Irish sensation, and Harry Bentley, after the Americans had been 3 up at 18 holes and 2 up at 27.

Loyal Britons easily found cause for cheer, even in that outcome, for if it hadn't been for a disputed decision on the twenty-first hole, Bently and Bruen, who played the last nine holes in 32, 5 under par, might have made the score Great Britain, 3; United States 1.

At the twenty-first, with his team still 3 up, Fischer played out of turn. The rules of golf decree that in such a case the hole automatically shall be awarded to the other team. But Bentley and Bruen refused to accept the penalty. Harold W. Pierce, of Boston, United States Golf Association vice president, acting as referee, didn't call it, and the match continued to a finish that left British observers and galleryites dissatisfied.

Sore point with them was the fact that Pierce did not immediately enforce the penalty, since he had seen the infraction committed. To that Pierce replied that, in his opinion, Bentley should have claimed the hole before play began on the next one.

Today's victories were the first Britain had scored since 1934, and the first time it had led in Scotch foursomes since 1923.

Yates and Bruen will lead off the singles tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. (3:30 a. m., E. S. T.). Behind them, at 10-minute intervals, will come Goodman vs. Thomson, Fisher vs. Crawley, Kocsis vs. Stowe, Ward vs. Pennink, Billows vs. Cecil Ewing, Smith vs. Peters and Haas vs. Kyle.

Mafuta Captures Monticello Purse Easily at Charles Town Track

Hacker Rides $12.20 Shot To Victory

Royal Business Second in Feature; Schley Nurse Third.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 3.—J. E. Hughes' Mafuta, carrying light weight of 100 pounds, ran off with the Monticello Purse, outstanding race on today's program. Unable to get out of her own way in her previous start in the mud, the daughter of Cherokee fairly flew around the six and a half furlong course today to defeat E. Johnson's Royal Business by two and a half lengths with Schley Nurse third.

The winner, at a $12.20 mutuel, was the longest shot in the field of five and stepped the route in 1:23 1-5. Morning Flight, former work horse for Bull Whip, was heavily played and went in the air at the break.

Apprentice Jockey Beverly Hacker took Mafuta to the front going to the first turn and the little filly drew out in the daylight. Anya attempted to catch her and faded. Royal Business then went into action with Jockey Root doing the booting and narrowed Mafuta's margin in the stretch.

A good Friday crowd of 5,000 participated in the sport and those who teamed Justa Giro with Dixie Bee collected a $64 mutuel in the daily double.

Lula Khayyam won her second purse of the meeting in easy fashion in the first race over the five furlong course. With Palumbo riding, the filly opened a long lead and was never in danger, downing Brainchild by six lengths. Philigal was third in the field of 4. Lula Khayyam paid $8.

Leon Garrett, injured here on Memorial Day, showed that he has not lost his form by bringing Justa Giro, a $17.80 shot, home to win the second race. Sending the Flying Ebony filly to the top in the opening furlong, Garrett gave her a hustling ride. Justa Jimmie was second from a slow beginning with IsleO'Joy third.

P. Da Lee Watts' Dixie Bee came from behind to win the third race in the role of a $4 favorite. Jockey W. Snyder brought the 7-year-old mare up in the stretch and she won in good fashion by a length from Crossing Over. The latter shook off Hard Chase to take the lead. Mudsill was third after moving up menacingly approaching the stretch.

Jockey Palumbo rode his second winner of the day in the fourth race, finishing a half-length in advance of Diso... Freds Warning was third. H... Gurdy, the favorite and a rece... winner, ran like a stuffed pig. Jockey Terhune, who rode Disown, appeared to have the race locked up entering the stretch but allowed Palumbo to come through on the inside. The winner paid $9.60.

HARD CHASE stopped after forcing pace. INDIANA went evenly, but could not threaten.

DISOWN ran FRED'S WARNING into defeat to open a lead and appeared to be listlessly handled in stretch. FRED'S WARNING set and forced pace and weakened, Jockey Snyder pulling up before finish line. HURDY GURDY could not keep up and showed disgraceful race.

NEWGRO, first away, shook off CANYNGE to take command and, under strong urging, held latter safe in final stages. CANYNGE taken under slight restraint when outrun by NEWGRO in early stages, rallied when placed to drive, but wasn't good enough. TULEYRIES LAD was hard ridden throughout. JIMMY D. went evenly, but could not threaten. TUFT HUNTER and WAR TALE had early speed.

LITTLE PERCY, steadied along after going to leaders with rush along backstretch, came through on outside, MISS DARLING to take command and drew out. MISS DARLING ran ROCK SPRAY into defeat, shook off challenge of DAY LETTER and, game for any effort, could not resist winner. DAY LETTER was forwardly placed throughout and probably would have won with stronger handling. STEPEE dropped far out of it after being blocked by GREAT GUN. Latter was not a factor.

Toby Bright Holds Central to Five Hits; Billy Robertson Has Perfect Batting Day.

By Jack Munhall.

Outhit, 5 to 3, Western capitalized on the wildness of Dizzy Dezerne and a two-run error by Shortstop Tony DiBlasi to defeat Central, 4-2, in an Inter-High series game at Western Stadium yesterday. The victory failed to lift Western in the standings, however, for the second-place Roosevelt nine walloped Wilson, 17 to 1.

Central was nursing a 2-1 lead, gained in the first, when the seventh inning opened and DiBlasi later opened his legs to permit a double-play ball scoot through to score two runs.

Dezerne, the eccentric right-hander who would rather get a hit than pitch a no-hitter, was in possession of a two-hit game at that point, but he launched his own downfall by walking, first, Pitcher Toby Bright and then George Oertel after one was out.

Seeing two of his mates on the base paths, Dick Lynham swatted what appeared to be a perfect double-play ball to short, but DeBlasi couldn't see it that way. So the innocuous-looking blow wended its way to centerfield and both Bright and Oertel scored. Overjoyed at the turn of affairs, Bill Swanson popped a ground rule double into the rightfield stands to tally Lynham with the fourth score.

Dezerne was then removed and Dick Rozelle, another righthander, was wheeled in for Central. He got the side out when Catcher Kenny Bransdorf picked Swanson off third and Irving Needle skied to center.

It was a tough defeat for Dezerne to swallow for as late as the sixth inning he appeared to have the game in hand. Mixing a slow curve with his fast one he had breezed through five innings—from the first to that seventh—without permitting a safety.

Central picked up its lone runs in the first inning on only one hit. Dick Smith opened proceedings with a walk. Zip Zimmerman singled to right and when the throw from Rightfielder Swanson bounded crazily over third, Smith scored and Zimmerman took third. Not content with that he took home as Bright held the ball. The steal was a close play and Umpire Watt at first ruled the Central runner out. When Catcher Hilleary dropped the peg, however, he changed the decision.

Western came back in the first to make a run when Oertel singled to right, Steiner booted Lynham's hit to third and Swanson singled.

Second Baseman Pat Hurley, of Central, contributed the fielding gem of the game in the fifth and also saved Central at least two runs. With the bases loaded and one out he reached at arm's length to snare a hot liner from the bat of Swanson and doubled Lawyer at second unassisted.

Tech High Team Beats Wilson, 11-7

Tech High's baseball team rode into fourth place in the interhigh standings on the wings of an 11-to-7 victory over the Woodrow Wilson nine yesterday at Roosevelt Stadium. Dick Wine captured his second straight victory on the mound for McKinley, although he was hit freely throughout the game.

A six-run first inning was largely instrumental for the Maroon victory. Hopping on Dick Offutt, Wilson's starting pitcher, for three hits, which, coupled with two walks and two infield errors, helped Tech to victory. The win raised Tech's hopes for an upset next Tuesday at Eastern Stadium, where the champion-bound Lincoln Parkers will be met.

Although outhit, Tech bunched her hits to advantage, and was able to come out on top. Chester Ciomei, by getting on base five times, proved to be a thorn in the side of the Wilsonites, who entered the contest fresh from a 16-to-7 triumph over Central on Tuesday.

After relieving Offiutt in the first inning, Bill Bush pitched a creditable game for Wilson. Leroy Curtis and Chet Ciomei were the outstanding hitters for Tech, each getting two safeties in four trips to the plate. Johnny Stevens led Wilson's attack with three singles in five tries.

Roosevelt Riders Drub Indians, 17-1

Jack Redinger, Roosevelt High School's fireball hurler, who replaced Billy Bauer, a teammate, in the second inning after the latter had walked three men in a row, retired the next three batters in order and went on to win his fourth straight Inter-High victory of the season as Anicostia bowed, 17 to 1, at Eastern Stadium yesterday.

Redinger, by his brilliant exhibition on the mound, kept the Rough Riders in second place, with the chance of tying Eastern for the public school title if the Lincoln Parkers happen to drop their last game to the Tech lads. During his stay on the mound he gave up six hits, walked only one man, struck out eight and pitched eight frames of scoreless ball.

The Riders had a youngster yesday that aided Redinger quite a bit. His name is Billy Robertson, nephew of President Clark Griffith, and here is what he contributed for the slugging and fielding honors for the day: Billy got three hits in three trips to the plate, one a tremendous home run over the centerfield wall, a double against the leftfield barrier and a single into centerfield.

When Redinger went to the mound with the bases loaded as mentioned before, the first batter to oppose him was Farr, who smashed a line drive in between short and third. Robertson went far to his right to make a beautiful one-hand catch and then whipped the ball to John Thrift to double Seaman off third. With the aid of this play a Rider rally, which had begun to blossom, was nipped in the bud, and the rest of the game is history.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Wesley Ferrell and Al Simmons was the combination that spelled defeat for the White Sox yesterday and to this pair go today's chief awards in the Man of the Month contest.

To Ferrell, five points, because he held Washington's lead safe with his six-hit pitching perfromance, because only one man reached second base against him in the last six innings and because his sacrifice and his two-bagger figured in two Washington runs.

To Simmons, three points, because his long home run with Bluege on base in the third inning broke up a 1-1 tie and was the blow that gave the Nats the winning margin.

To Cecil Travis, one point, because his sensational play on Kreevich's grounder in the third inning at a time when two were on base, stopped a White Sox rally, because his catch of Hayes' line drive in the eighth checked the Sox again and because he reached base three times in four turns at bat.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because he virtually cut off two runs with his brilliant one-hand stab of Schlueter's line drive in the second inning, and because his fielding play on the same man's hot grounder in the seventh was the finest of the day.

Bob Feller Hurls Today

Indian Ace to Oppose Hogsett in Opener.

Washington's three-game winning streak and its hopes of making some headway in the pennant race today will be exposed to the pitching of Cleveland's Bob Feller.

The league-leading Indians, who move into Griffith Stadium for a three-game stay after two straight wins over the Athletics, announced officially yesterday that Feller would take the mound this afternoon.

The 19-year-old fast-baller has won six games against one defeat this season. He escaped being charged with a defeat in his last appearance against the Nats when he was removed from the game in the tenth inning before Dutch Leonard completed his 13-inning, 1-0 shut-out of the Tribe.

Manager Bucky Harris, who has withheld Elon Hogsett from relief pitching roles for nearly two weeks with a starting assignment against the Indians in view, will send the sun-tanned left-hander to the mound today.

Hogsett's last appearance was a relief shift against the Indians on May 20 when he relieved Jimmy DeShong in the second inning and wasted 7 1-3 innings of superb pitching. After relieving DeShong he permitted only four hits and one run—Earl Averill's homer.

The presence of the right-handed Feller on the mound will cause Manager Bucky Harris to revere to his left-handed batting order. Mel Almada will replace Al Simmons in center field; Taft Wright will succeed George Case in right field, and Buddy Myer will displace Ossie Bluege at second base.

The Indians will be operating without the services of Rollie Hemsley, Feller's special catcher, who is still suffering from a broken finger on his throwing hand, injured a week ago.

Any time that Manager Bucky Harris wants to abandon his reversible outfield and keep Al Simmons in the lineup against both left and right handed pitching it will be all right with the Griffith Stadium customers. Simmons was given a tremendous ovation after his double and home run of yesterday, and is a threat whether he hits or strikes out.

in the event that also was a practice round for the District women's championship, to be played there next week. Mrs. Stokes' 82-5—77 was next, while Mrs. H. O. Porter had the least putts with 32.

Miss Brown had 12 pars and a birdie, on the seventh hole, in her round that tied a score set by Mrs. Meckley over the same course last year, that was not played in competition.

Mrs. Hussey played the back nine in one under men's par in recording the course mark that broke a previous mark held by Mrs. T. J. Johnson by four strokes. Mrs. Johnson won the low gross prize in the event with an 86, as Mrs. Hussey elected to take the net cup.

The spring tournament was also completed at Army and Navy yesterday with Mrs. J. W. Ludewig defeating Mrs. W. L. Weible, 6 and 5, in the finals. Mrs. C. D. Kirk won the second flight over Mrs. W. E. Sullivan, 2 up, while Mrs. G. Lingle won the third flight, defeating Mrs. Groff, 2 up.

Mrs. Hussey, who was also medalist in the event, won the first flight consolation to take her third prize of the day, defeating Mrs. A. H. Moses, 1 up. Mrs. Schlossberg won by the same margin over Mrs. York, while Mrs. Forrester won the third flight consolation, 1 up, over Mrs. Calver.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Mrs. J. O. Rhyne won the Class A prize in the 3-5-7 tournament at Congressional, with 11 points. Class B went to Mrs. V. P. Simmons with nine points, Class C to Mrs. C. H. Harper with nine, and Class D to Mrs. J. A. Zahn with 12.

The putting contest was won by Mrs. Charles T. Penn.

Dauber Favored In Belmont Stake; 6 Will Go to Post

New York, June 3 (AP).—William duPont, jr.'s Dauber, winner of the Preakness and second in the Kentucky Derby, heads a field of six 3-year-olds named today for the renewal of the $25,000 added Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park tomorrow.

Dauber is expected to be the odds-on favorite to take the mile and a half of the last of the three events forming America's "triple crown."

Other entries include Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, second in the Preakness; Ogden Phipps' Magic Hour, Mrs. W. P. Stewart's Pasteurized, John Hay Whitney's Gentle Savage and Mrs. W. M. Jefford's Jolly Tar.

This clipped one-tenth second off Johnson's track record for the Randalls Island Stadium, and was only a tenth off the I. C. A. A. A. record of 9.6, set by Frank Wykoff, of Southern California, in 1931.

Greer was among the qualifiers in both dashes, negotiating the 220 in 21.6 seconds. Other double qualifiers included such speed merchants as Adrian Talley, of Southern California; Marty Glickman, Syracuse's Olympian, and Arnold Nutting, of California. Talley hung up the fastest furlong, 21.4 seconds. Johnson, back in competition after a layoff with measles, was clocked in 9.8 and 21.6 for his trial heats.

Nutting emerged as the only triple qualifier. The sturdy Californian won his sprint heats in 9.8 and 21.5, besides registering the second best broad jump with a leap of 24 feet ½ inch.

Lieut. Farrin Meets Lynch For Net Title

Seeded Players Clash at Edgemoor Today in City Tourney.

Lieut. James Farrin and Hugh Lynch, first and second seeded players, respectively, meet today for the singles championship of the City of Washington Tennis Tournament. The match, scheduled at Edgemoor Club, is at 2:30 o'clock.

Following this encounter, Dooley Mitchell and Ralph McElvenny play Lieuts. Farrin and Bill Howard for the doubles title.

Farrin gained his berth in the round of two by turning back young Allie Ritzenberg after a torrid struggle, 6—4, 8—6, while Lynch had things his own way in defeating Davie Johnsen, 6—2, 6—1. Lynch was never behind. The closest Johnsen came to winning a set was 1—2 in both sets.

Farrin, however, was forced to come from behind to win the first set from Johnsen, a G. W. student, and also was extended in the second. Johnsen took a 4-3 lead in the opening set but Farrin broke his service twice in the last three games to pull away.

In the second set Farrin got a 3-1 advantage but Johnsen rallied nicely to deadlock the issue at 4-4. They split the succeeding four games and then Farrin again broke his foe's service to take the match.

This morning at 10 o'clock at Edgemoor opening round matches in the boy's division of the City of Washington tournament get underway with the first rounds for juniors following at 11.

Pairings follow:

Boys.

10 o'clock—Jack Hoopes vs. Jack Timoth. Sterling Lee vs. Robert Bensinger. John Lincoln vs. Robert Avancena, Eddie Richardson vs. Charles Norris.

11 o'clock—David Smith vs. James Murdock. Chandler Brossard vs. Bill Kerr.

Maurice Cowan and Patrick Sterling drew first-round byes and will not play until Sunday.

with one target less than a perfect score.

Events listed today are the .410 100-target championship, the junior championship at 50 targets, the women's open 100-target, the 20-gauge two-man team championships. The event starts at 9 o'clock this morning.

Tomorrow, the five-man team and individual championships will be run, concurrently, 50 targets in the morning and 50 targets in the afternoon. Scores made in the team event will be counted in the telegraphic shoot.

The National Capital Skeet Club Rebels are defending champions in the five-man team event. They won the title last year with a score of 478x500 and in a recent match at Kenwood they scored 491, a score which is 1 point less than the world record held by the Roseland, N. J., team. Roseland is also entered in today's meet.

About 20 of the Nation's leading five-man teams are entered in the event, however. The team that will cause most of the trouble will be the Los Angeles-Santa Monica club. This outfit also recently just missed the world record by one point.

The women's events will also offer some keen competition. The women's Open championship will be defended by Mrs. William C. Coe, of Washington. Washington's other top-notch skeet star, Mrs. Albert W. Walker, who was rated the Nation's outstanding skeet shooter of 1937, is also in the event. Mrs. Walker holds the Middle Atlantic, Delaware Open and the Maryland-District championships.

The National Capital Skeet Club may be reached by driving out Connecticut or Wisconsin avenues to Bradley road. The club is on Bradley road, 3.8 miles past Wisconsin.

Yarosz, Here to Box Abrams, Holds Brief Workout at Arena

Former Middleweight Titleholder Appears to Be in Good Shape; Abrams Appears Ready.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Teddy Yarosz, former ruler of the middleweight domain, who is seeking his lost regal headgear, arrived in town yesterday to complete training for Monday night's bout with George Abrams, and in his first public workout did nothing to disturb the prevailing odds of 1-2 in his favor.

In town of Trainer Ray Arcel, who was in Barney Ross' corner last Tuesday night, the curley-haired Pittsburgher loosened up at Turner's Arena, worked two rounds on the heavy bag and finished with a session of rope-skipping and posing for pictures. El Brookman was on hand to supply the competition if he cared to box, but Yarosz asked him to come back today. They'll battle this afternoon, starting at 1 o'clock.

Soft-spoken and affable, Yarosz admitted he's heard of Abrams and his impressive record, but heard nothing to cause genuine alarm. He regards the bout as a soft touch, financially, but hopes George will give him enough competition to keep him on edge. The former title-holder has a bout with Champion Freddy Steele tentatively booked next month on the home lot, and wants to work as frequently as possible to be ready for it.

Arcel, an old and expert hand at the business of getting fighters ready, has his man in fine fettle for the impending festivities, and confidently predicts that Yarosz will dispose of the home-town pride and joy in less time than it takes to write this piece. Arcel not only has heard of Abrams, but enjoyed the pleasure of working with him last year when he was here helping Freddy Steele train for the "Hobo" Williams scrap. George worked as a sparring partner with Steele and Arcel obtained a No. 1 line on him.

"I know him well," Arcel said. "He's a good, strong kid, but green, too green for a man of Yarosz's experience. I don't think Teddy'll have any trouble with him."

Yarosz revealed a murderous left jab during the workout. It shoots out like a battering ram, sinks into the bag with a resounding thump, and recoils like an army field piece. He used his right only sparingly, and it doesn't appear to be of much value, but that left is something else again.

Abrams, meanwhile, boxed with Kid Howie under the watchful eyes of Manager Syd Fishel and Prof. Harry Raskin, and both appeared satisfied with his work. Raskin, heretofore a neutral observer, believes Yarosz is headed for a tumble, and Fishel, quite naturally, can't see anything but an Abrams' victory.

Bill Lee Wins 3d Straight Shutout, 4-0

Blanks Bees as Cubs Move Game and Half From Lead.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 3.—Bill Lee, the Chicago Cubs' tall right-hander, pitched his way within one game of the National League record for consecutive shutouts today by blanking the Boston Bees, 4 to 0, on three hits.

It was his third straight shutout and his fourth in five games. The exception was a 4-to-1 triumph over the Bees, May 23.

Ed Reulbach, another Cub hurler, established the record of four back in 1908, and it was equaled by Grover Cleveland Alexander, of the Philadelphia Phils, in 1911.

Including one inning before Lee was removed for a pinch hitter on May 15, he has allowed only one run in 47 innings and none in his last 32 straight.

Only five Bees reached base today as Lee registered his sixth victory of the season, and none reached third. Rabbit Warstler, Debs Garms and Vincent Di Maggio singled and Tony Cuccinello and Elburt Fletcher walked.

Te Cubs clubbed Lou Fette, who was removed in the eighth inning for a pinch hitter, for all eight of their hits. Augie Galan and Bill Jurges splitting four of them. It was Fette's sixth defeat.

Victory advanced the Cubs within a game and a half of the league-leading New York Giants.

Slack Summer Outlook Looms Over Business

Index of Industrial Production Expected to Reach New Low.

New York, June 3.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Business is facing the dullest summer in several years. Indeed, operations in a number of industries will probably not be much above the level prevailing at the low point of the last depression. The Standard Statistics Co. index of industrial production, which has been following a roughly horizontal course since the beginning of the year, is expected to reach a new low for the current depression this summer. The index for the first four months of the year averaged close to 70 (1926 equals 100) and a recession to around 65-66 in July and August is looked for.

"The automobile industry is planning sharp further curtailment of operating schedules during the third quarter. Schedules are on a day-to-day basis, making it difficult to venture a definite estimate, but production is likely to be below that for the third quarter of 1932, which marked the low for the last depression. Such a development would not be without its favorable implications, however, as manufacturers are making strenuous efforts to be in a position to enter the new model year with healthy inventories, and only through restricted production can this objective be attained.

"The prospective decline in industrial production this summer is significant in that it indicates that further marked progress will be made in reducing inventories. Consumption has been running ahead of production for some months, and there is sound basis for believing that by late summer or early fall the inventory position of industry generally will be fairly healthy. This factor alone would not promote a sustained business recovery, but it would mean that a serious depressant had been removed."

Balt. Cons. Gas Plans New Refunding Issue

New York, June 3 (AP).—Six insurance companies which bought $18,000,000 in 3¾ per cent bonds from Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore in 1934 have agreed to take a new issue carrying a 3¼ per cent coupon, it was announced today.

The transaction was considered in bond circles an unusual method of reducing debt charges to take advantage of the decline in money costs since 1934, since in effect it amounts to exchange of present holdings by the investing institutions for the lower-yielding issue. Most corporations have resorted to open-market borrowing for repayment of old debts in refuding at lower interest rates.

Stock Seat $58,000, Decline of $3,000

New York, June 3 (AP).—The sale of a New York Stock Exchange seat was arranged today at $58,000, a drop of $3,000 from the previous sale a month ago.

The low mark for a membership this year was $52,000 last March, which also was a record minimum since 1918. The 1938 high was $75,000 in January.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended May 28 as approximately 5,500,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 7,576,000 tons; 1936, 6,678,000 tons.

Mexico Tariff Hits U. S. Trade

High tariffs reduced United States exports to Mexico almost 60 per cent in April, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The Mexican tariffs, which were boosted about 200 per cent in January and have been reduced somewhat since April, cut April exports to Mexico to $3,938,000, compared with $10,616,000 in the same month last year.

Mexico provided one of the few exceptions to the tendency of nearly every major customer in the world to buy more from the United States in April this year compared with the same month last year. The United States, on the other hand, curtailed its merchandise purchases in nearly every part of the world. The warring nations of China and Japan continued in April to buy more from the United States than they did a year ago and to sell less.

Wheat Prices Advance With Fears of Rust

Threshing Returns From Texas and Oklahoma Under Expectations.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 3.—Texas and Oklahoma threshing returns less favorable than expected, together with uneasiness over Kansas rust-breeding conditions, did much to lift Chicago wheat prices today.

A maximum bulge of 1⅞ cents here took place, aided by sharp upturns at Winnipeg and Liverpool. Trade volume in the Chicago futures market was larger than recently, with buying for millers, exporters and speculators.

Incentives were found in optimistic reports about a liberal rate for United States Government loans on wheat, as well as in assertions that Washington officials were planning to divert $100,000,000 to relief purchases of agricultural products.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½ to 1⅛ cents above yesterday's finish, July 70¼@70⅜, September 71½, corn ⅛-⅜ up, July 57⅜@57½, September 58⅛@58¼, oats ¼-¼ off, rye unchanged to ½ advance, and provisions 2 cents to 7 cents higher.

Spanish Loyalists Sell Silver to U. S.

Treasury officials indicated yesterday they had agreed to purchase about $2,000,000 worth of silver brought to New York recently by the Spanish Loyalist government. The silver was contained in a cargo first thought to contain many millions of gold and later determined to be a smaller amount of silver.

A Treasury spokesman said that no long-term agreement had been made with the loyalists. The current Treasury price at New York is 42¾ cents per ounce.

Brazil Halts Sales Of Cotton to Germany

Rio de Janeiro, June 3 (AP).—The Bank of Brazil today, in effect, suspended Brazilian raw cotton exports to Germany, opening the way for German cotton purchases in the United States.

Finance Minister Arthur de Souza Costa said the suspension affected only Brazilian exports payable in German compensation marks. "We had a quota of 62,000 metric tons of cotton we could export to Germany." He said, "the 1938 quota has been filled."

The Market

Stocks Work Irregularly Lower With Trading at Vanishing Point; Commodities Higher.

New York, June 3.—Stocks survived the dullest and narrowest trading day in several years with only minor losses in price and were even able to turn in a gain here and there. Final prices were about as good as any, with fractional declines in the majority. A large number of stocks ordinarily active did not appear on the ticker tape at all or failed to sell until the closing minutes. Government bonds were somewhat mixed, but commodities hardened. July wheat closed a cent higher at 70⅜ cents a bushel.

Stocks eased a little as they almost always do when the volume of business moving is too slow to permit buyers and sellers to match ideas. With few on either side, the spreads between bid and asked prices tend to widen, and in a slack market the first to give way is nearly always the prospective seller. For that reason prices inclined to slide a little. This market was distinguished by the low number of sales; the price irregularity and weakness were only incidental.

Sales in the first hour were only 70,000 shares. The total shrank to 50,000 in the second hour, lost another 10,000 in the third hour and managed only 30,000 shares in the fourth hour. Closing dealings were around 80,000 shares, to bring a total around 280,000 shares, the smallest five-hour turnover in four years.

Business and political news of the day scarcely was responsible for that stagnation. It resulted from the accumulation of uncertainty growing out of legislation, actual and in prospect, the growing difficulties of industry and the resistance shown to readjustments that inevitably will have to be made—on the part of the Government, business itself in its general conduct, wages of labor and selling prices. The day's statistics included a slight rise in railroad freight car loadings, an estimate of a record-breaking wheat crop and a continued decline in commercial loans at the banks. Among the steps now being taken by industry is a sharp reduction in mining operations.

Wealth Destruction.

The only virtue which the farm control schemes of the New Dealers have practiced and proposed is that, in general, some slight rotation of crops has been imposed and land has been given a rest from its eternal burden of bearing wheat and cotton. Both cotton and wheat, and, to some extent, corn, were plowed under during one or two years of the AAA, but even in those instances it is doubtful if much actual loss of wealth was involved. Wheat, for example, in the winter belt usually is planted on many acres that are not designed to grow it. The wheat is sowed in early autumn, used for cattle pasturage until snow falls, and then is plowed up in the spring and planted to something else. No Wallace ever has been needed to encourage farmers to do that, and no farmer ever suspected that he was guilty either of destroying wealth or of pegging prices. In the same way farmers destroy a portion of other planted crops, to help the remainder, or for other purposes, before harvest.

The crime of the New Deal scheme for price control consisted in the dishonesty of paying farmers merely for not producing, in encouraging them to reduce crops below what otherwise would have been normal consumption needs merely to lift prices at the expense of consumers and taxpayers, and in maintaining real barriers to greater consumption of farm products. Little actual destruction of existing wealth took place, but a great deal of potential wealth was destroyed in that the farm control mess helped to prolong the business depression and to raise the cost of living.

Economic Consequences.

Whether in shutting down their mines the copper companies are now destroying or conserving wealth is a matter open to argument. Copper isn't worth anything at any time except insofar as it can be put to use. If kept in the ground this year and mined next year it is conceivable that it will contribute to an economic loss for the country, although the net profit on two years' account might be larger for the copper companies involved in restricting production. Certainly it is uneconomic to produce at a loss and any copper company is justified in shutting down when it no longer can sell its metal profitably. Merely to hold up the price of copper, produced at a profit, but at a smaller profit than desired if sold at current prices, is a horse of another breed, and some might say that premature reduction of operations or stoppage of mining tends to prolong the depression by postponing a revival of business based on low cost of materials.

Cost Rigidity.

Labor now is engaged in just such an uneconomic effort, fighting any suggestion for lower wage scales despite the fact that a lower scale might greatly increase employment and total pay rolls. As some of the railroad executives are saying, but apparently with only moderate success in finding attentive ears with anything but hats over them, a cut in railroad wages at this time is quite likely to mean a considerable increase in railroad employment, and if that helps to keep railroads out of bankruptcy courts the benefits will be enormous and enjoyed by railroad labor first of all. Business revival will get under way just as soon as the old debts of high costs are paid off, and no sooner—provided, always, that the Government decides to choke its economic managers, who in general encourage business management in all its worst practices of price fixing and cost rigidity.

Brokers' Loans.

The increase of $25,000,000 in brokers' loans, which did not appear to reflect either stock market borrowing, new securities transactions or operations of Government securities dealers, created some guessing as to the reasons for the increase. One of the more ingenious explanations was that brokers were borrowing to set aside free balances of customers. Inquiry among the banks which do the larger portion of brokers and dealers' loans narrowed much of the increase down to two banks. These institutions reported that the explanation appeared to lie in sales of Federal funds and clearances on a few deals involving payment which happened to go through Tuesday and Wednesday. Sales of Federal funds, or checks upon the reserve bank, often are made for the purpose of picking up Government securities ready for delivery and when made go into the brokers' loan figures.

Hatchets and Shotguns.

When Chairman Douglas of the SEC addressed a stock exchange gathering two weeks ago he had a speech prepared in which he promised to let the exchange move around a bit, but reminded it that he was standing behind the door with a well-oiled shotgun in his hands. Some said in actual delivery of his talk the chairman omitted the shotgun portion. Perhaps he did, or perhaps good cheer was so noisy at the time that the words didn't register. Anyway, he wrote them, but he may have written them before he was sure that the new stock exchange governing committee would see everything in the same light as used by the SEC. Whatever the case, it is evident Mr. Douglas now would like brokers and the public to think he has great faith in the stock exchange. In an interview here today he promised no "cracking down" on the exchange.

Stock Trading Drops To Five-Year Low

New York, June 3 (AP).—Brokers had their dullest session in nearly five years today when only 284,850 shares changed hands in the New York Stock Exchange, the lightest turnover since August 20, 1934. Curb exchange dealings were even slower, with transactions only 69,000 shares, the smallest since July 12, 1932.

Crack-Downs Out, Declares SEC Chairman

Douglas Plans Round-table Co-operation With N. Y. Stock Exchange.

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities & Exchange Commission, today revealed a plan, far reaching in its implications, for "round-table" co-operation between the commission and the New York Stock Exchange. Talking to reporters after the first of what he indicated may be weekly meetings between commission officials and those of the exchange, he said of the joint SEC stock exchange problem:

"We hope to solve them in the round-table manner. The old so-called crack-down is the antithesis of the round-table method. We feel we can assume Martin (William McC. Martin, chairman and temporary president of the exchange) will go along with us on this method. We see no need of further laws."

Douglas said specific solutions for various problems confronting the exchange and the regulatory body were mostly still in the conversational stage. "We have a general agenda of unfinished business," he said. "But it is not the method, but the joint approach which is the important thing."

Meeting of Minds.

Douglas said he felt this was the first real meeting of minds between Martin and other members of the new governing regime of the exchange and Federal officials.

Today's meeting was attended by Commissioner John W. Hanes, who was once partner in the stock exchange firm of Chas. D. Barney & Co., and by James J. Caffery, New York regional administrator for the commission. Among those who attended for the exchange, besides Martin, were Paul V. Shields and Harry K. Smith, members of the board of governors; A. Tate Smith, assistant to the chairman; Dean K. Worcester, vice president, and Laurence C. Payson, president of the Stock Clearing Corporation.

Douglas also expressed optimism on the likelihood of a nearby solution of the fundamentals of conflict between the Federal Government and private utility systems.

"Relationships between private utilities and the SEC are the best they have ever been. Solutions should begin to shape up within the next month. Our negotiations are out of the talk stage and into the action stage. I am very, very hopeful."

Coffee Exchange Seat Lowest in 21 Years

New York, June 3.—The New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange reports that the membership of Allan M. Clement has been sold to Walter D. Stuart at $2,950, off $50, and the lowest price at which an Exchange membership has sold since 1917.

Charles S. Lowry, 21 ear old son of Frank C. Lowry, prominent in sugar circles and former president of the National Biscuit Co., has been elected to membership in the exchange. George I. Gilbert, of the U. & J. Lenson Corporation, was also elected.

Royal Dutch Executive Sees No Lack of Oil

Shortage Unlikely Even in Distant Future, Says Managing Director.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—There is no likelihood of a world shortage of petroleum even in the distant future, said J. E. F. de Kok, managing director of Royal Dutch Co., in his annual report released here today. Regarding the question that "continually crops up" as to how long the oil fields of the world can continue producing sufficient quantities to satisfy requirements, de Kok commented:

"Thanks to the constant progress in technique, both in the sphere of geology and that of production, there is every reason to assume that even in the distant future there will be no cause for anxiety about the extent of the available oil reserves."

The executive of the Big World Operating Co., with headquarters at The Hague, said regarding petroleum conditions in the United States:

"The year ended with a total estimated crude oil stock of 306,084,000 barrels, or upwards of 17,500,000 barrels in excess of that at the end of 1936. The increasing supply during the last quarter and the cessation of the seasonal demand led to a decrease in price for the products and in some cases to a reduction of the crude oil price.

"In judging the situation two favorable factors enter into the picture: The extension of the interstate oil compact to September 1, 1939, and of the Connally act to June 14 of that year.

"Both of these government measures will thus continue to exercise their salutary influence in the crude oil production sphere for a considerable time to come."

Copper Output Cut To Balance Sales

New York, June 3.—Sales of copper in tons by months so far this year have been as follows: January, 25,468; February, 23,515; March, 22,405; April, 23,027; May, 19,018.

In April primary production was 41,698 tons. The scale of operation is being reduced and by the end of June should be at a 30,000-ton rate. Scrap will add about 7,000 tons and custom ore about 4,000 tons, making a total of 41,000 tons. While sales are running at only around 20,000 tons, exports are about 11,000 tons and domestic deliveries about 30,000 tons, so the contemplated rate of production will be in balance, more or less, with exports and domestic deliveries.

Actual consumption, as indicated by fabricating operations, appears to be running at 40,000 tons per month, compared with deliveries of 30,000 tons, so that the industry appears to be still drawing to a considerable extent on invisible stocks.

Associated Gas Taxes Rise 17%

Ithaca, N. Y., June 3.—Taxes of Associated Gas & Electric Co. and subsidiaries continue to increase at a rapid rate and for the 12 months ended March stood at $16,033,092 or 17 per cent higher than in the previous similar period, stated S. J. Magee, vice president and general manager, at the annual meeting of stockholders held today.

Mr. Magee said that in addition to taxes, rate reductions constituted another serious drain on the company's business. In 1937 these amounted to $2,953,000, and have been substantial thus far in 1938. He added: "During the past ten years taxes on Associated Gas & Electric Co. and subsidiaries have amounted to nearly $100,000,000."

CAPE ANN
on Chesapeake Bay

Beautiful Broadwater Creek bounds Cape Ann on the west, gives us a half-mile of safe harbor. Across the Bay you see the distant shores of Poplar and Kent Islands, while to the south sky and water meet.

Only 27 Miles From the City

Restricted, private, with more park space in proportion than Washington, the ideal combination of forest and sea, a development plan entirely new, prices so low that the average family can easily afford this delightful refuge from the hot blasts of summer. No wonder that more than 30 houses have been built in record time and that others are going up. The smooth beach has no treacherous holes, and children can be left entirely to themselves. The famous fishing waters of Herring Bay are next door, though that may not be a nautical way to say it.
You can still have a cottage in time for the season.

50-ft. Lots as low as $125.00.

Cottage of 5 rooms and bath on small initial payment and $28.00 monthly.

Route: Through Marlboro and at top of hill turn right on Annapolis road, cross Patuxent River and at Drury turn right and go 2 miles to Bristol, where turn left and follow signs to CAPE ANN.

Bob Burns Says—

Once in a while you see a newsreel showing a bunch of wealthy people or nobility and I can't help thinkin' some of 'em would look mighty funny if you could forget who they are.

It reminds me of the time I went down home for a visit and was invited to a big reception at Aunt Sophie Ledbetter's house. I pointed to a lady over in the corner and asked Aunt Sophie, "Who's that long, lanky woman over there?" Aunt Sophie says, "Not so loud—that lady jest inherited $50,000 and she's tall and stately now."

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY— The Magnetic Torpedo — By Frank Martinek

THE ART OF SPYING UPON SPIES IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN FIRST DEVELOPED IN A MODERN WAY BY THE FRENCH UNDER NAPOLEON--THIS SORT OF INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITY STILL BEARS THE FRENCH NAME CONTRE-ESPIONAGE
WINSLOW'S WORK AGAINST THE SPY RING IS THEREFORE A TRUE FORM OF COUNTER-ESPIONAGE-- NOW, WINSLOW, YOU SAY THE TIGER" TURNED YOU LOOSE WITH INSTRUCTIONS-- WHAT ARE THEY?
WELL, SIR, I'M TO SMUGGLE OUT PLANS OF THE NEW SUBMARINE--
- AND HE GAVE ME PARTICULAR ORDERS TO BRING HIM SOME DOPE ON THE NEW MAGNETIC TORPEDO

Workers Alliance Eyes Approaching Elections

Future relationship of the Workers Alliance to the organized labor movement and "plans for active participation in the primary elections and the general November election," will be considered by the national executive board of the alliance at a three-day meeting starting today at the Lee House, Fifteenth and L streets northwest.

Other items to be considered by the 23 members of the board include plans for a large-scale drive to organize all WPA projects; increase in WPA wage scales and improvement of conditions on direct relief; and a drive against the $1,000 ceiling order of WPA limiting the man-year cost on all white collar projects.

Messenger Boys Used For Political Pamphlets

Perhaps for the first time in the history of Washington, or even the Nation, Western Union messengers have been employed to distribute political pamphlets.

Thousands of copies of "One Man's Opinion," written by W. P. Doyle, of 411 Union street, Nashville, Tenn., were left at offices in the business section yesterday. The booklet sets forth the doctrines of Doyle, who dwells on "fallacies of the Administration," and the ways in which he would remedy them.

Red Cross Honors Percy Smith for Volunteer Work

Officials at the Red Cross headquarters said only one other similar certificate has been awarded. The presentation was made at the District Chapter house. Smith has spent more than 500 hours doing volunteer work.

He has served on the first aid detail in almost every major parade during these years, including the Inaugural, Halloween and special Army Day parades.

Maryland Police Hunt Nymph Who 'Runs Like Rabbit'

An attractive young woman who lives in a densely wooded section near Woodmoor, Md., and "runs like a rabbit when you see her," was the object of a two-hour search by Maryland police yesterday. At least two Maryland residents have reported seeing the "mystery woman" in the last two days.

Mrs. R. P. Phibbons, of Woodmoor, reported her brother, John Tucker, had seen the woman standing near the edge of a thickly wooded section about a mile from the Phibbons house. Tucker was quoted as saying the woman was about 25 or 30 and well dressed.
